Turnpike commissioner violates state law

Lester F. Burlein . . denies wrongdoing.

HARRISBURG — What's the chairman of a turnpike Commission got to do with homes for the mentally retarded? Plenty — provided the homes are located in the county where the commission chairman is both the county political chief and a practicing professional engineer.

This the case of Lester F. Burlein, chairman of the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission and one of the commonwealth's top Republicans.

Despite a Pennsylvania law which specifically prohibits commonwealth officials from representing private interests before state regulatory bodies, an investigation of official records shows that Burlein has been doing just that for the past 10 years.

Burlein rose to state-wide prominence a decade ago from his power base in Honesdale, the Wayne County seat, when Republican Gov. William Scranton appointed him to a 10-year-term on the Pennsylvania Turnpike Commission.

Today, in his last year on the commission, he serves as its chairman but the $18,000-a-year post, it seems, is only a part-time job. Burlein also is a licensed professional engineer and, according to records, has taken as clients several nursing homes in the state.

Nursing homes — for the retarded as well as the elderly — need engineers to represent them before the state. Plans prepared by professional engineers showing the homes conform to fire safety regulations are a condition for state licensing.

The performance of such work by Burlein while a Commonwealth Turnpike Commissioner has brought into question the propriety of combining the two jobs.

Allegations that Burlein was using political muscle to benefit one of his clients first surfaced out of a legislative investigation last year of suspicious deaths at the John Reilly home for retarded children in Wayne County.

Wayne County is where Burlein has been chairman of the county Republican organization for more than 20 years.

At a hearing called last November by the legislature to probe into the operations of the John Reilly home, Wayne County Coroner Robert Jennings testified under oath that Burlein may have played a role in attempting to quash investigation of an alleged murder at the home.

It was this investigation, Jennings said, that eventually led to the arrest of John Reilly, owner of the home, on a charge of murdering a retarded patient in 1970.

Records show Burlein has represented, as a professional engineer, at least three private nursing homes in his home county since becoming a Turnpike Commissioner. And it appears that this representation may have been illegal.

Pennsylvania law states that "No state employe, except in his performance of his duties as such employe shall, for remuneration, directly or indirectly represent any other person upon any matter pending before or involving any state agency." The law stipulates that members of the Turnpike Commission are state employes.

In 1957, Pennsylvania Attorney General Thomas McBride issued an interpretation of the law which allowed state employes to perform "routine" jobs for others involving a state agency, such as preparing income tax forms.

A spokesman for the attorney General's office said it would have to investigate Burlein's professional activities to determine if they could be considered "routine" and thus exempt from the state ethical conduct law.

Burlein denies any wrongdoing and apparently sees no ethical conflict between his role as a high state office-holder with considerable political pull and as a professional engineer who represents state licensed and controlled homes before state agencies.

However, a hard look at Burlein's activities over the years shows extensive and, in some cases, questionable, involvement with private nursing homes in the state.

Consider these instances in his home county:

—At the John Reilly home in Honesdale, Burlein readily admits that as a politician he intervened with ranking state officials in behalf of John Reilly. However, he insists he was not using political pressure when he wrote Republican Attorney General Walter E. Alessandroni on May 20, 1964, about an investigation into alleged child abuse at the Reilly Home.

Escapees captured

CARBONDALE — Two inmates who escaped from the Farview State Hospital, Waymart, in Wayne County Monday night were captured at 4:15 p.m. Wednesday by the Carbondale City Police. State police at Honesdale said the escapees, Nicholas Gelormini, 29, Pittsburgh, and Robert Hawke, 29, Forty Fort, offered no resistence. Both men are hospital trustees living at the institution's halfway house. Gelormini is a convicted murderer while Hawke was convicted of possession of stolen goods and the larceny of a motor vehicle.

Former aide pleads guilty

WASHINGTON — Frederick C. Larue pleaded guilty to a charge of conspiring to obstruct justice. The former White House aide, a close campaign associate of former Attorney General John Mitchell, waived his right to indictment. The Mississippi oil man said he advised against the wiretap raid but joined in the cover-up "at least by acquiescence."

SS benefits increased

WASHINGTON — The Senate Wednesday approved a 5.6 per cent increase in Social Security benefits, effective Jan. 1, 1974, to help the aged endure the rising costs of inflation. At the same time the Senate adopted by voice vote a $268.7 billion spending ceiling for fiscal year 1974 which begins Sunday along with a provision under which President Nixon would have to get consent from Congress to impound appropriated funds. The across-the-board Social Security increase would provide an additional $3.2 billion for about 30 million persons receiving benefits.

White House makes charge

Dean blamed for cover-up

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House charged John W. Dean III Wednesday with being "the principal actor" in the Watergate cover-up. But the ousted White House counsel said "there is no way" he could have done it himself.

In a long memo, the White House referred to former Attorney General John N. Mitchell as Dean's "patron," hinting that it is cutting loose support of Mitchell, Nixon's beleaguered former campaign manager.

The exchange brought to sharp focus the differences between Dean, who has testified that President Nixon probably knew about the planning of Watergate and definitely knew since last September about its cover-up, and the White House, which broke more than a month of silence on the scandal.

The White House memo also appeared to be a switch in strategy to consolidate support for H. R. Haldeman and John D. Ehrlichman, while cutting loose all other high-level administration aides who have been implicated in the scandal.

While Dean was in his third long day of testimony at the nationally televised Senate Watergate hearings, Frederick C. LaRue, former top aide at the Committee to Re-Elect the President and to Mitchell, pleaded guilty in U. S. District Court to conspiring to obstruct justice, a legal term for coverup.

White House Special Counsel J. Fred Buzhardt, in a long memo submitted to the committee for its questioning of Dean, charged him with being "the principal author of the political and constitutional crisis that Watergate now epitomizes."

The memo was interspersed with quotations from newspaper accounts, depositions by Haldeman and Ehrlichman, Nixon's former top two aides, and Buzhardt's own statements.

"The Watergate affair was so clearly the outgrowth of the discussions and plans he had been in on that he might well be regarded as a conspirator with them," the memo said. "He must immediately have had reason to realize that his patron, Mitchell, would also be involved."

Presidential Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler, with Nixon in San Clemente, Calif., told reporters: "This is not a definitive White House position."

He said the memo represented a compilation of information from sworn depositions, testimony in civil suits and other sources.

Sen. Daniel K. Inouye, D-Hawaii, read the memo into the record and asked Dean to comment paragraph by paragraph.

"Senator," Dean said, "I'd just like to make a general observation. This is what I know and knowing the position I held on the White House staff, there is no way I could have done, conceived and implemented the plan they are trying to suggest that I did."

Sen. Joseph M. Montoya, D - N. M., immediately requested that the committee subpoena Buzhardt. Sen. Sam J. Ervin Jr., D-N. C., the chairman, took the request under advisement, and instructed the committee staff to find out how much firsthand knowledge Buzhardt had.

John W. Dean III . . . undergoes intensive questioning

President not involved in charge against Dean

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. (UPI) — President Nixon was not involved in the compilation of a memorandum accusing John W. Dean III of masterminding the attempted coverup of the Watergate scandal, the White House said Wednesday.

Press Secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon did not see nor did he approve beforehand the memo, which was prepared from testimony and depositions "of others," and said it should not be taken as the definitive White House position on the matter.

Ziegler said it was incorrect to describe the memo as a substitute cross examination by the President.

Asked the source of the allegation that Dean was the "principal author of the political and constitutional crisis" precipited by Watergate, Ziegler said "from others."

He said Nixon was briefed on the contents of the memo Wednesday, and said it was prepared by the counsel's office as part of the normal delegation of authority.

Deputy White House Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said Nixon himself was spending very little time on the Watergate matter and was devoting much of his energies to the other business of the presidency.

Warren said the President has not watched any of the proceedings on television, even on the regular news programs, and has not used any of the video tapes that the Signal Corps prepared of the hearings for later viewing.

In Nixon's most recent pronouncement on Watergate, he said that he had no prior knowledge of the Watergate bugging or any other illegal surveillance for political purposes, that he was not aware of and did not participate in efforts to cover it up and did not authorize offers of executive clemency to buy the silence of the conspirators.

House upholds action

Nixon vetoes bomb ban

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon, declaring it would have a crippling effect on a negotiated peace settlement, Wednesday vetoed legislation that would have cut off funds for bombing in Cambodia.

The House without debate promptly sustained the veto, but the battle between the White House and Congress appeared to be far from over.

The Senate immediately resurrected the antibombing amendment by voting 67 to 29 to attach it to a bill that would raise the national debt ceiling. Senate Democratic Leader Mike Mansfield said it would be attached to every appropriate piece of legislation until the President accepts the verdict of Congress.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald Warren, in San Clemente, Calif., said Nixon would continue to veto other bills which carried the antibombing amendment. But Warren said, "The President is gratified that the House acted with alacrity in sustaining the veto of this bill."

In his message read in the Senate and House, Nixon said cutting off funds for the bombing would "cripple or destroy the chances" for an effective negotiated settlement in Cambodia.

"It would be nothing short of tragic if this great accomplishment, bought with the blood of so many Asians and Americans, were to be undone now by congressional action," Nixon said.

The President also said it would call into question "our national commitment not only to the Vietnam settlement, but to many other settlements or agreements."

Senate unanimously backs Kelley as new FBI chief

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Clarence M. Kelley won Senate approval to be the FBI's permanent director Wednesday, with not a vote cast in opposition, and he immediately vowed to be his own man by providing "firm but fair" leadership of the Watergate-tarnished agency.

By a 96-0 margin, the Senate confirmed Kelley's nomination to head the FBI which he served for 21 years before over a decade as chief of police in Kansas City, Mo.

When sworn in, the 61-year-old law enforcement officer will give the FBI its first full-fledged director since the death in May, 1972, of J. Edgar Hoover, who had held the post since the inception in 1924 of the Justice Department's enforcement arm.

Kelley, obviously pleased by the strong vote of confidence given him in the Senate, alluded to criticism of the FBI's Watergate investigation in a statement issued to reporters before he left for his Kansas City home.

"I can honestly say that I am nonpolitical," he said. "I have always been a professional. I owe allegiance to no political committee, leader or background."

As director, "I will make my own judgments and decisions," Kelley said. "I intend, as I have in the past, to be a firm but fair administrator."

Should questions of authority arise, Kelley said he would consult first with his immediate superior, the attorney general, and then with the President if necessary.

"And if that fails, I have the right to resign," he said.

Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., suggested that Kelley set as his first task the removal of "any people left in the bureau who participated or acquiesced in the excesses of recent years" to make sure "the bureau is never misused or abused again."

When that is done, Kennedy said Kelley "must assist in the process of cleansing the rest of the federal government of the debris of the Watergate conspiracy in all its prior and subsequent manifestations."

Exports embargoed to avert food shortage

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In an emergency action designed to head off meat, poultry and milk shortages, the administration Wednesday imposed an immediate embargo on exports of soybeans, cotton seeds and the meal and oil products from those two crops.

The grain meals are key ingredients in producing livestock and poultry and are currently in tight supply at prices far above normal. Farm officials warned that the pinched supply of feeds was forcing live stock producers to slash production.

The embargo, effective at 5 p.m. EDT, was announced at a news conference by Commerce Secretary Frederick Dent and Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz.

"These controls have been imposed because of the extremely tight supply situation in these comodities until the (1973) soybean crop is harvested. Whether controls will be necessary after that time will depend on the amount of the harvest, the level of export demand, and the level of prices in the United States," Dent said.

Burlein opened Capitol doors for private interests

On Wayne County Republican Committee stationery, Burlein wrote that he never saw "mistreatment of the children" on the three occasions "during the past year" he was making surveys at the Reilly home. He did the surveys, he told Alessandroni, "because I was hired by Mr. Riley (sic) to secure approval of buildings by the Department of Labor and Industry."

Burlein said he was asking for Alessandroni's "personal attention" in the case because he was concerned the brutality charge — in which Reilly was accused of beating a retarded child — might be "based upon personalities and half-truths." Reilly was eventually cleared of the charge after a trial in Wayne County Court.

Burlein also concedes that he intervened in Reilly's behalf again in 1970 as the state was moving to close the Reilly home because its Welfare Department was dissatisfied with the way the home was being operated.

Burlein said Reilly's attorneys had been unable to get an appointment with Stanley Miller, then the Republican Secretary of Welfare, to discuss the matter. Burlein said he got the appointment for Reilly's attorneys but had no further involvement with the case.

The state did not close the home but in April, 1971, Reilly leased it to Commonwealth Concerns, Inc. The corporation operated the home for about 18 months until it was finally closed by the state after the drowning death of another patient. Both Burlein and Miller deny that Burlein used political pressure in Reilly's behalf in this instance.

Burlein maintains these two incidents were the extent of his intervention in Reilly's behalf but Jennings, the coroner, ties Burlein with "high persons in high office" exerting political influence on the Labor and Welfare Departments to gain special treatment for Reilly.

Coroner's testimony

Jennings said this while testifying before the legislative committee in Scranton last November during which he gave the committee "a complete confidential file, particularly on Mr. Burlein" which he claimed justified his allegations.

The file was introduced as testimony at a public hearing and Pennsylvania state law stipulates that all official government files are open to the public. Despite this, however, the file is being withheld from public view by Sen. Robert Mellow, D-Scranton, chairman of the legislative investigating committee.

Mellow said he was withholding the file because he did not want to jeopardize Reilly's murder trial, which is scheduled for the fall.

Reilly is accused of forcing Frank Dickerson, 23-year-old patient at his home, to kneel naked in the snow in March, 1970 for punishment. Dickerson contracted pneumonia and later died. Reilly's trial is scheduled for the fall.

In his testimony before the legislative committee, Jennings, the coroner, linked Burlein to Reilly by saying Burlein may have been involved with a deputy attorney general who tried to quash the investigation Jennings made into the Dickerson death.

Intervention cited

According to a transcript of the committee hearings, Jennings said that shortly after he ordered Dickerson's body exhumed in August, 1970, Deputy Attorney General Frank Lawley summoned him to Harrisburg and "tried to scare me off the investigation."

The coroner testified that while he was talking with Lawley, he managed to read a note on his desk. The note said, "Call Burlein when Jennings leaves."

— At the Merna Owens home in South Canaan, another home for the retarded. In a Jan. 19, 1973 memo to an assistant to Gov. Milton J. Shapp, Labor Secretary Paul J. Smith reported that labor officials had learned Burlein had stamped — but had not prepared — plans submitted for the Owens home in the 1950s.

". . . The plans were not really drawn by the engineer whose stamp appears on the plans but rather were drawn by a contractor and for a fee of $25, the professional engineer loaned his stamp to make these plans appear to be official and legal . . . if proved to be true, this is grounds for forfeiture of the stamp registered with this professional engineer," Smith wrote.

Norman Owens, the elderly owner who closed his home in January rather than comply with the strict fire safety code the Labor and Welfare Departments adopted in 1972, said in an interview these plans were "really drawn" by a lumber company employe some 16 years ago.

Plans for private home

But Owens stressed the plans were for the Owens' private residence — not the home for the retarded. When he realized the Labor Department would not approve them unless a professional engineer's stamp appeared on the plans, he took them to Burlein, he said. Before stamping them, "he went over them and made a few changes," Owens said.

Burlein's version was different. While he conceded the plans were "drawn by a contractor friend" of Owens, Burlein said the plans were for the home for the retarded. He said Owens actually built the home before he learned he needed labor approval for the plans. When Owens learned this, he asked him to stamp them, Burlein said.

Burlein said he examined the building to see if it conformed to the plans, satisfied himself that it did, then put his seal on the plans.

Eventually, the Labor Department approved the contractor's plans after they were submitted with Burlein's stamp, Burlein said.

The engineer said Labor Secretary Smith was "wrong" in saying Burlein had "loaned" the stamp.

James Eady, a Labor Department spokesman, said he and two other officials discussed the feasibility of bringing a complaint against Burlein because of the stamp. But Eady said that he, Chief Department Counsel Charles S. Solit and J. F. Dwyer, director of the Department's Bureau of Occupational and Industrial Safety, decided against this.

No action taken

Eady said there were several reasons for not making the complaint: the fact that the incident occurred so many years ago, the statute of limitations, doubt that Owens would be a friendly witness to the state, and Owens' age. (He is in his 70s).

Labor files record another irregularity involving the Owens home, but do not link Burlein or anyone else to it. The files reveal labor officials did not inspect the home during most of the eight-year period the Republicans controlled Harrisburg in the 1960s. Throughout this period, however, the Welfare Department continued to license the home. This was despite Welfare regulations stipulating that Welfare licenses for health care facilities cannot be renewed unless the homes pass annual fire safety checks by labor.

Labor Department records indicate the Owens home was not inspected by labor officials between June 1964 and September 1971 when Labor Secretary Smith said a labor inspector discovered it "by chance."

Said Smith in the letter about the "loaned" stamp, "It is not clear how this home could be licensed by the Welfare Department without showing evidence that they had been inspected by the Department of Labor and Industry."

— At the White Deer Inn, Inc. in Hawley, also a home for the retarded. On Dec. 8, 1970, A. J. Piccola, chief of the Labor Department's Division of Buildings, wrote to Burlein, the engineer representing White Deer, and told him the department approved plans Burlein submitted for fire escapes and emergency lighting and alarm systems for the home.

Piccola also told Burlein the department wanted some changes — changes which "must be incorporated in the construction before the building will receive final approval."

Also, the division chief instructed Burlein to notify the department if anyone occupied the wood-frame former hotel before owner Joseph D'Annibale obtained an occupance permit from the department.

Burlein apparently never carried out this instruction, even though D'Annibale has said he opened his home for retarded boys without the permit on Nov. 1, 1970, or more than two full weeks before Burlein submitted the plans for the required fire escapes and emergency systems.

A reporter who looked through both labor and welfare files could find no record that Burlein ever told the state that White Deer was open.

Moreover, the man who was supervising inspector at the department's regional offices in Wilkes-Barre until late February 1971 said he "certainly" would have moved to close White Deer if Burlein had informed him it was operating without the permit.

George Dobson, the former official, couldn't recall if Burlein ever contacted him, but said it was a safe assumption the engineer had not.

Yet Piccola's letter told Burlein to contact Dobson when construction of the proposed fire escapes and emergency systems began.

The letter also said "failure to notify" the department that the construction "proposed by these plans is completed, and-or the use and occupance of the property" without an occupancy permit would violate Pennsylvania's 1927 Fire and Panic Act.

Attempts to contact Burlein on this point were unsuccessful. His office said he was unavailable for comment.

State acts on homes

— At the Capitol. In late 1972, the Labor Department was moving against both the Owens and White Deer homes because neither complied with the strict 1972 fire safety regulations.

The department forced the Owens home to close and forced White Deer to curtail its operation sharply. White Deer sent most of its 30 patients home at Christmas and Merna Owens phased out its operation throughout January.

On Jan. 15, Burlein's brother-in-law, Rep. William W. Foster, took protest petitions with several hundred signatures to Gov. Shapp's office. The petitions objected to the Labor Department actions against the Owens and White Deer homes.

Foster hotly denies any connection between the fact that he hand carried the petitions to the governor's office and "the fact that he's (Burlein) my brother-in-law."

And he said it is "absolutely wrong" for anyone to suspect a connection. Foster, also a Republican, is a former Wayne County Commissioner who now represents Wayne, Pike and part of Monroe counties in the House of Representatives.

Foster insists he did not know the homes were his brother-in-law's clients and says he took the petitions to the governor's office at the request of a Wayne County woman who helped circulate them.

For his part, Burlein said, on the one occasion he was available for comment, that he was unaware of the petitions until "very, very recently."

"I never knew a thing about what Rep. Foster brought in the line of petitions," Burlein said in a tetephone conversation. "I knew nothing about it until very, very recently."

While he admits that "as a county leader" he twice acted for John Reilly, Burlein maintains that he never attempted to go beyond his capacity as a professional engineer in behalf of the White Deer and Owens homes. And he maintains he never used his position of State Turnpike Commission chairman or of a top state Republican to aid his professional clients.

"I never had the occasion to use any political contacts for them," he said.

China detonates biggest nuclear device since '64

By United Press International

China set off one of its most powerful nuclear devices Wednesday, apparently dropping it from a plane, to push ahead with its go-it-alone atomic policy despite recent Soviet-American summit accords aimed at reducing the danger of all-out war.

The Bhabha Atomic Research Center in Bombay, India, said the Chinese blast occurred in mid-morning at the Lop Nor test site in the northwestern province of Sinkiang.

In Washington, U.S. defense analysts said information available from classified sources indicated the Chinese nuclear device had a yield of one to three megatons. They said the information indicated the Chinese test device was probably dropped from an aircraft. A megaton is equivalent to the explosive power of one million tons of TNT.

The analysts said the explosion, 15th in China's series of atmospheric blasts since 1964, was one of Peking's biggest, but relatively small by U.S. and Soviet standards.

China and France are the only two nations which have defied world public opinion to continue atmospheric tests. The United States and the Soviet Union ended their atmospheric tests years ago and have confined them to underground tests to avoid radioactive fallout.

FTC may act to break up oil firms to end gas crisis

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A high Federal Trade Commission official hinted strongly Wednesday that the FTC is thinking about going to court to break up the big oil companies in a move to end the gasoline shortage.

James T. Halverson, director of the FTC's Bureau of Competition, said the anti-competitive structure of the oil industry has helped create the gasoline shortage.

"Since early this year, the Bureau of Competition staff has been receiving with increasing frequency reports of independent (gasoline) marketers who have been forced to close some or even all of their stations," he said. "We are concerned that unless something is done quickly, irreparable harm may result."

His staff, Halverson added, "has preliminarily concluded that the structure, conduct and performance of the petroleum industry raises serious antitrust issues."

Halverson appeared to imply that his staff would recommend some sort of antitrust action to the full FTC. It would be up to the Justice Department to file any such suit if the FTC decided to proceed.

As Halverson testified before a Senate judiciary subcommittee, the Washington Star-News quoted congressional sources as saying the FTC's year-long staff study of the energy situation would recommend an antitrust suit against the eight biggest oil companies. The suit, the dispatch said, would seek "divestiture of key oil firm functions in order to make the industry more competitive."

State requests delay for pollution plans

HARRISBURG (UPI) — Pennsylvania has asked the Environmental Protection Agency for more time to develop plans to meet the federal government's stringent secondary clean air standards.

The request came in a letter from Gov. Milton J. Shapp to Daniel J. Snyder, administrator for EPA's Region III. Snyder's office released a copy of the letter to UPI Wednesday after Shapp refused to do so.

The request appears to be an attempt to soften the effects of the tough federal standards by giving power, steel and other industries more time to develop and install the necessary pollution control equipment.

These along with the coal and railroad industries have complained bitterly about the economic hardships they have suffered in trying to meet the primary air pollution standards.

Shapp said in the letter the state is still resolved to meet the federal primary air pollution standards by the 1975 federal line.

New fire truck added in Jackson

West End Bureau

REEDERS — The Jackson Township Volunteer Fire Company officially added a new vehicle, valued at approximately $12,000, to its fleet of fire fighting equipment this week.

The used, 1958 LaFrance pumper, which was acquired from the Flourtown Volunteer Fire Company, contains a 750-gallon pump and has facilities to carry a total of 750 gallons of water.

Although actually obtained as early as February and being called out for approximately three fires in the Reeders area since that time, the finishing touches were added to the vehicle early this week and it was officially made part of the force.

The new pumper replaces a 1954 pick-up utility truck, and, according to Chief Howard Shick, was needed for the general fire protection in the township.

"This was a real good deal; the truck is in beautiful shape and we only had to pay $12,000 for it," commented Fire Company President Fred Martin. "A new truck would have cost about four times as much and we just couldn't afford one at this time. The administration of the company went along with this purchase whole heartedly."

According to Assistant Chief Stanley Hallet, the men received several training sessions on the operation of the new vehicle. He said at this time the men are quite adept at working the new type of apparatus on the pumper.

The truck also contains four-inch suction hose and one and a half and two and a half red-line hose for fires.

"This new vehicle will enable us to provide a better protection for our rural area, where water is not readily available," commented Shick. "With this new pump we can get water faster and farther to where we need it."

Besides the new pumper, the Reeders company also maintains a 1969 GMC utility truck, a 1948 tanker, capable of holding 1,050 gallons of water; a 1950 GMC tanker, capable of holding 1,250 gallons of water and a 1967 GMC tanker, capable of holding 1,750 gallons of water.

Jackson Fire Company joins county control center

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

REEDERS — The Jackson Township Volunteer Fire Company has decided to go on the emergency call system of the Monroe County Control Center in Stroudsburg; the new alert system is scheduled to begin any day.

According to Company President Fred Martin, the new calling system is already supposed to be in effect and residents should already be informed about the fire fighters' new emergency fire number.

Because of a delay in the arrival of special devices to pick up tones involved in the system, however, the company is still presently using the old fire call number of 629-1330.

According to Martin, when the control center hook-up is complete, residents will be required to make their calls to 424-2400. He emphasized that at least one week before the change is made, however, residents will be advised of the new number via an announcement in The Pocono Record.

Martin also indicated that the company has special emergency number stickers for telephones ready to disperse to residents in their area, when the new number becomes effective.

According to both Martin and Chief Howard Shick, the company has been considering going on the control center since January.

Now the volunteers are equipped with a telephone call system on a three-phone hook-up at the Reeder's post office, the fire company itself, and on Shick's home phone.

To their knowledge, the company officers said no calls had been missed in the past, but they stressed that this was a possibility if nobody was manning any of the three phones when a call came in.

According to Shick the control center will provide around the clock, 24-hour coverage for residents, will have a professional taking the emergency information at all times, and will automatically trigger the company siren and tone alerts in volunteer homes.

In addition, according to Martin, the control center will be cheaper to operate under. Currently the company telephone system costs about $40 or $50 a month. The cost for going on the control center is $120 a year.

The company has already received its Federal Communications Commission license for the operation of two-way radios. The company now has a radio set installed in each of its five trucks, in the chief's truck and at the fire house.

The total hook-up on the control center is estimated to cost about $400, according to Martin.

At their meeting next week, the volunteers will also be discussing the possibility of having individual tone alert systems, at a cost of $125 a piece, installed in volunteer's homes, located where the regular fire siren can not be heard.

It has not been determined as yet, if the company or the volunteers, themselves, will pay for the tone devices.

According to Shick, one advantage with the tone alerts, even for nearby volunteers, is that if the siren should become defective, all the fire fighters would still be able to be reached in case of emergency.

18-year-old youth dies in dump truck crash

WIND GAP — A Northampton youth was killed Wednesday morning when his dump truck crashed south of here.

He was identified by state police at Easton as Gordon Halstead, 18, Northampton R.D. 2. He died at 10:45 a.m. at Easton Hospital.

Northampton County coroner Joseph Reichel will perform an autopsy today to determine cause of death.

Police said Halstead was driving south on Legislative Rte. 48071-Jackingsburg Road in Bushkill Township when he missed a left turn while descending a grade.

The truck collided with a pile of graval located about 50 feet off the road.

Halstead was trapped in the truck for two hours with rescue workers from the Bushkill Township, Wind Gap, Wind Gap and Nazareth Fire Companies working to free him.

He was taken to the hospital by the Bushkill Township Ambulance.

Halstead was hauling a load of graval for his employe, the Smith Escavating Co. of Bath.

Pediatrician joins staff of hospital

PALMERTON — The board of trustee of the Palmerton Hospital has approved the recommendation of the medical staff by appointing Arnold Kramer, M.D., to the associate staff with privileges in pediatrics and newborn nursery.

Kramer is a graduate of Duke University Medical School in North Carolina. He took pediatric post graduate work at Vanderbilt University Hospital and Arkansas University Hospital, Little Rock, Ark.

He is a member of the American Academy of Pediatrics and is certified by the American Board of Pediatrics. Prior to coming to Palmerton, Kramer practiced pediatrics in Port Jervis, N.Y.

He will be joining Dr. Charles Smith in the practice of Pediatrics in Palmerton on July 1. Smith presently maintains a pediatric office in the old hospital building in Palmerton. Smith will be opening a second office in July in the Carbon Plaza on Rte. 443.

The addition of Kramer to the pediatric staff enables the hospital and pediatricians to provide qualified pediatric coverage to patients at all times.

Kramer, his wife and three children will reside at 445 Edgemont Ave., Palmerton.

SWIFTWATER — Kevin Reinhardt, a recent graduate of Pocono Mountain High School, was awarded a Monroe County Master Builders Prize during commencement exercises at the high school.

Parade corps to hold meeting

WIND GAP — The Wind Gap Blue Eagles Parade Corps will meet at 7:30 p.m. Thursday at the old Wind Gap Elementary School.

The meeting is called for reorganization. A reunion indicated members would be willing to do this.

School ruling mandatory

Many people may be disappointed in the Supreme Court's ruling against tax credits or reimbursements for parents of children in non-public schools, but there's little doubt the court had any other choice.

Spokesmen for the Pennsylvania act struck down by the court complained that the ruling was against parents, rather than non-public schools. Said Howard Fetterhoff, director of the state's Catholic Conference, "This is a parents' act. The money doesn't go to the schools, but to parents who pay tax dollars."

The reasoning is balanced on a very thin line. The parents may indeed receive the money, but it is money that will find its way to the schools in the form of tuition payments and materials expenses. Any way you slice it, tax credits for parents of non-public school children is aid to non-public schools, and that is one point on which the Constitution is pretty clear: "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion."

Is there anyone in the house to say a church-sponsored school is not an "establishment of religion?"

Constitutional rights are guaranteed, not abrogated by the court's ruling. Most Rev. J. Carroll McCormack, bishop of the Scranton Catholic diocese, complained that "the opinion patently denies parents their basic, constitutionally guaranteed rights, privileges and freedoms."

We don't think so. Apparently, the bishop was referring to the freedom of choice. Well, parents still have the right to make a choice between a catholic or other denominational school and the public school system. They must pay for the privilege, but then, there are no privileges without their price.

This is not the same as pricing property out of the reach of minority groups to bar them from exercising their freedom to live where they choose. In that case, there seldom are low-priced homes in suburbia to allow a black family, for example, to escape the urban jungle.

But there is a perfectly good alternative to non-public school education — public schools, among the best in the world. They serve millions of people many of whom are members of religious groups that sponsor their own school systems. If our public school system is good enough for them . . . .

The point is that, although state leaders (including Rep. Martin Mullen of Philadelphia, naturally) have pledged to find some other gimmick for funneling state funds into the non-public school system in one way or another, these gimmicks all violate the letter and intent of the Constitution. The only way out is to amend the Constitution to allow for such funding.

Thanks, Mr. Garrity

It's nice to have someone agree with you. And it's even nicer when that someone is in a good position to know what he's talking about.

We refer to Thomas Garrity's warning to Pennsylvania's county commissioners assembled of the abuses possible under the state's Act 515. Garrity, president of the Pennsylvania Assessor's Assn., told the commissioners, "I'm for Act 515, but I'm afraid a lot of land speculators will hide under it."

This is precisely the point we have argued ever since legislation was passed enlarging the scope of Act 515 to include counties such as Monroe and Pike. And, now that Monroe County is in the process of having an open space program drawn up, it is good to hear someone like Garrity propose a systematic evaluation of open space applications and admonish, "No land should be allowed special taxation if it is not suited for farm land or timber as the law provides."

If Act 515 is administered properly, not many land owners will qualify for tax breaks under that measure. If it is administered improperly, with politics and favoritism playing prominent roles, then the county's entire tax structure will go down the drain, along with a good many taxing bodies that have built their future budgets on it.

In a parting shot, Garrity came close to the truth. Asked about soaring property values and taxes in Monroe County, he ventured, "values were probably 100 per cent too low" to begin with.

Exactly. The value of land in the area has soared for people interested in buying. Logically, then, it must also climb in tax value. As long as we are willing (anxious, even) to sell our property to outsiders for top dollar, we must take the high taxes such inflated values bring along.

President should speak out

WASHINGTON — Everywhere I have traveled during the past two weeks — in the mountain states and in the Midwest — I find that President Nixon still has a long way to go to regain lost confidence and trust. The President needs to realize that even his best friends have deep and unresolved doubts and reservations about his post-Watergate conduct.

It is evident from everyone I have talked with that Nixon's primary problem is not to persuade his critics but to persaude those who voted for him — those who are still basically on his side. He must show them that he is fully aware of the magnitude ot what went wrong, and also of what must be done to enable his natural supporters to recover their faith in the integrity and trustworthiness of his Administration.

Nixon has never been one to go very far to placate his partisan opponents. And, of course, that is not what will repair the consequences of Watergate.

The one thing which has impressed me most in my many conversations is that it is his friends, not his enemies, to whom Nixon must address himself with a cleansing condor which has not yet been manifest.

Still want Nixon

I find little evidence that even if the 1968 election could be rerun many people would want it to come out differently — even with all the information now in the open.

I do find much evidence that those who wish the President well are deeply troubled and deeply dissatisfied with the explanation Nixon has given concerning what he thought and did, what he didn't think and didn't do, throughout the post-Watergate period — right down to today.

With rare exceptions, they don't believe that the President had any advance knowledge of the Watergate break-in, but they keep on asking without ever feeling satisfied with the answers: "How could he have gone for months without getting his hands on the facts, even if his top aides were trying to cover it up to save their own necks?"

These loyal supporters of President Nixon are not admiring the President's post-Watergate explanations, and they are waiting for something better before they withdraw their troubling reservations.

There are other matters which trouble these people who instinctively would rather trust the President than not. They feel intuitively that Nixon is being cagey nearly every time he offers any information on Watergate, rather than being open and direct. They simply do not feel comfortable or satisfied with that attitude. Also, they find it hard to comprehend how so many men whom the President trusted to exercise such vast power in his name could prove to be so untrustworthy.

President innocent?

The tendency of most of these people is to believe that the President is innocent on the basis of presently known evidence. They want to believe he is innnocent. They expect that it will turn out that he is innocent of both approving or acting to cover up the Watergate and related offenses.

They don't want the President to resign. They don't want any talk about impeachment. They want the Senate Watergate investigating committee to get on with the hearings as rapidly as possible. The top witnesses' testimony should provide insight as to how high responsibility reached.

It seems clear to me that Nixon still has a very real problem of credibility in the Watergate aftermath.

It is true that he has done much. He has fired, or allowed to resign, nearly his whole top White House staff. He has approved the appointment of an independent Watergate prosecutor. He has greatly watered down his concept of "executive privilege," which seemed to be holding needed evidence in escrow. He has made a trusted Republican politician — former congressman and former Secretary of Defense Melvin Laird — his chief domestic adviser. He is carrying on the non-Watergate business of the Presidency with his customary skill and vigor.

But many of the President's acts and explanations have seemed to come tardily and reluctantly. I think I reflect a wide hope, bordering on demand, among Nixon's own supporters across the country. They want to hear the Watergate story more fully and more forthrightly from the President himself.

Stories Behind Words

The Jig Is Up

A "jig" was a quick, lively dance. The name later was applied to the music that accompanied the dance.

During the 18th century it became customary to give a light, comical performance at the end of, or at an interval in, a play. This performance — because of its light, lively nature — also was called a "jig."

A trick or joke is usually of a sprightly and comical nature. Therefore, "jig" acquired another meaning — a joke or trick.

This last meaning is the one referred to in "the jig is up." The expression means that the trick is over, the scheme has been revealed, and it is time for a reckoning.

Letters TO THE EDITOR

Who's fault is spray blunder?

Editor, The Record:

Who is responsible for the gross mishandling of the county and township Gypsy Moth spray program?

Having already sacrificed half of the population from each of my 10 honeybee colonies, Pocono Aerial Spray Service called me again Saturday night for the third time to advise that they planned to spray neighboring properties with deadly Carbaryl Sevin on Sunday morning. When this call came it was raining hard and was 10:30 p.m. — I could not get out to cover the bees, but Brad Oliver of the spray service agreed to delay spraying until later to allow me time to get out in the morning. By 7 a.m. Sunday, the bees were already collecting nectar and I was not able to cover them.

I so advised Oliver by phone, also stating my objection to the repeated sprayings in the area which necessitated covering the bees each time. He agreed not to spray the two neighboring properties that day, although he indicated that he would like to do the one property (which was the property of Mr. Ayres, who is on the zoning hearing board of Paradise township) I took Oliver at his word and pulled the grass plugs from the hive entrances to allow free flight of the bees again. Two hours later, without further notice, the spray plane came over and was spraying Mr. Ayres' property without consideration for my bees or the promise made.

I have listened to the pros and cons of this argument between the spray service and coordinator Ronald Reinhart, and while I am cognizant of Reinhart's failure to properly coordinate the spray program so one given area could be completed in one spraying, I also can see that the spraying contractors are adding to his short-comings by making some very bad decisions on their own. This deliberate spraying in the vicinity of my bee colonies on Sunday can be laid at the doorstep of the spraying service itself.

Nancy Shukaitis has claimed that bee keepers were notified spraying was to take place. When were they notified, Nancy? A general notice to beekeepers advised "Spraying depending on weather, will begin approximately May 7, 1973." Is this the kind of notice you give beekeepers who have to know precisely when to cover their hives? Spraying in my area was not begun until June. Was I to cover my bees on May 7 and keep them that way until spraying began in June?

After this article appeared in the paper I heard nothing from anyone for weeks and became anxious. I called the commissioners office several times and finally was told by Reinhart that he did not know exactly when spraying would be done and told me to keep in touch with the spray service itself. I then called Oliver and he assured me that I would be given several days notice before spraying took place in the vicinity.

Next thing I knew the spray plane was spraying less than a mile away along Rt. 171 and no notice was given me at all. The same night Oliver came to my house about 10 p.m. to advise me they intended to spray Rt. 191 near my home the next morning. I was disturbed that spraying had already taken place without forewarning in the area. Oliver acknowledged that it had, but didn't seem to know it would be close enough to do harm to my bees. I covered my bees that night, but I do not think they sprayed the next day.

The following week Oliver telephoned — again at 10:30 p.m. — to advise they would spray the next morning. Although ready for bed, my husband and I both dressed and spent the next hour smoking in and covering bees. They sprayed early the next morning. By the following morning half the bees from each colony lay in piles dead on the entrance of the hives. Each day I find more bees which have slowly died from the effects of this slow killing toxic insecticide.

As though this were not enough, one day last week, early in the evening while bees were still out foraging, the plane again swept over Rt. 191, again spraying without any notice whatsoever and no chance to cover the hives. When I complained to Oliver about this he claimed to know nothing of any plan to spray, but said they had missed some places and maybe went back to spray it. He blamed Reinhart, the coordinator saying they had no cooperation from him and had to do all the work themselves. He said the mapping and ballooning he was hired to do was not done.

I have discussed this problem with Reinhart, who blames the spray service for not cooperating with him, saying that they wanted to plan their own spraying program so they could spray when it suited them best. He told me he had advised the supervisors that he washed his hands of the responsibility as coordinator. As far as I'm concerned, however, this does not relieve him of carrying out the duties he was hired to do and he is equally as guilty as the spray service in any blunders that were made.

I have also spoken with two Paradise township supervisors, one of whom didn't even know that Sevin spray would harm bees. This same supervisor brushed me off by telling me to contact their solicitor I made six calls over a period of three days to reach the township solicitor, but he was never available. It is quite obvious by this time, that each participant in this planning committee is shoving the blame for this disaster onto the next fellow. Its just another of those mishandled undertakings where our leaders cannot get their supposedly smart heads together in a close cooperative manner.

What's the matter with our officials that they do not research these projects before undertaking them? Why would a supervisor who sits on the board which endorses the use of Carbaryl Sevin, not know the toxic effect it has on bees and pets? Why do not the supervisors, county, spray service and coordinator know how far bees will forage that they cannot be shut in tight to suffocate, and that they will carry contaminated food back to the hive to destroy the young brood? Why are our leaders not knowledgable of the hazards involved in spraying in certain types of weather when updrafts would jeopardize the safety of pilot and plane?

All these points should have been studied and considered by those coordinating the spray program in order to work out a solution before starting to spray. Because of their lack of cooperation and communication — their total incompetency — I have suffered the unnecessary loss of 10 fine bee colonies, three years of work building up these colonies and the loss of this and the next two years honey crop, if, after this last spraying any bees remain at all.

No one realized more than I the extent of damage done by the moths. Our 20 acres are heavily infested, too, and are doing untold damage. I sympathize with neighbors, who like myself, have fine ornamentals which are being eaten alive. I respect the fact the majority of my fellow residents wish to do something to rid themselves of these hairy monsters. Although I personally had no faith in the spray program from the beginning, I did not fight against and am not objective to it if it is proven that this will do the job.

I had hope that Dylox or some other safe method would be possible, but since it wasn't I realized that the use of Sevin would result in some damage to my bees. I did not, however, expect planes to be spreading poison repeatedly and without warning. The manner in which this spraying program was carried out, the deliberate and malicious spread of poison, not once or twice but at least three times within range of my hives, the fact that the spray service personnel were well aware of the location of my hives, all make it quite clear that no one really "gave a damn" whether they killed my bees or not.

The people in charge of this program are totally incompetent and I hold them directly responsible for my loss. Certainly they are not worthy of being salaried for such blundering, and their actions will certainly not win any respect for the county committee who hired them to do the job.

Nixon's 'stop Wallace' plot

WASHINGTON — To eliminate George Wallace as a threat to President Nixon's re-election, the White House not only smuggled $400,000 in cash to his political rivals in Alabama but also brought pressure on him through a tax investigation of his brother.

Long before the 1972 election, the President knew from his secret polling that Wallace at the head of a third-party ticket would drain votes from him. The polls showed as many as four out of five Wallace voters otherwise favored Nixon. The White House, therefore, wanted to stop Wallace from running for President as an independent.

Both the secret polling and the stop-Wallace strategy were directed by the President's former chief of staff, H. R. Haldeman. So secretive were the moves against Wallace that Haldeman didn't even confide in his brother-in-law, who served as a go-between.

The White House strategy in 1970 was to block Wallace from winning back the governorship of Alabama. This would have deprived him of a power base and would have reduced his ability to campaign for the presidency in 1972.

Kalmbach funds

Haldeman, therefore, arranged to sneak $400,000 to Wallace's rivals during the 1970 Alabama primary. The money was siphoned from surplus campaign funds in the custody of the President's personal lawyer, Herbert Kalmbach.

Mysterious arrangements were made for Kalmbach to fly across country and hand over the first $100,000 to a stranger at New York City's Sherry-Netherland Hotel. Not long afterward, Haldeman's brother-in-law, France Raine, delivered another $200,000 presumably to the same mystery man at the Sherry-Netherland. A similar tryst was arranged at Los Angeles' Bank of California where Kalmbach turned over the final $100,000.

Neither Kalmbach nor Riane would comment on the strange transactions. Sources close to the investigation told us, however, that both men followed blind instructions. They were never told that the money would be used against Wallace, nor did they learn the identity of the bagman.

We also have been unable to identify the mystery man. From White House sources, we have established only that Haldeman's Man Friday, Larry Higby, was in touch with former Postmaster General Winton "Red" Blount about channeling anti-Wallace money into Alabama's 1970 Democratic primary. Bount couldn't be reached for comment.

Brother Gerald

At the same time that Haldeman sluiced $400,000 into the campaign against Wallace, he also requested a rundown from the Justice Department of its tax case against Wallace's close associates, including his brother Gerald.

The Justice Department sent back a confidential progress report to the White House. According to this document, the Internal Revenue Service's audit division had found that Gerald Wallace allegedly had omitted legal-fee income from his tax returns in 1967 and 1968.

The charge was that the Wallace brothers' law firm was used in funneling political kickbacks and that Gerald failed to report all the income that came to him through the law firm. After deducting large losses from his cattle farm, he reported a total taxable income of $109,944 in 1967 and $65,980 in 1968.

The Justice Department report added that, on January 20, 1970, the case was referred to Internal Revenue's crack intelligence division, which handles criminal investigations.

We ran the tax story, which got a big play in Alabama. In the subsequent primary, George Wallace had a close call. He nosed out ex-Gov. Albert Brewer by a narrow 51.5 per cent of the vote.

Thereafter, the White House changed its strategy and sought to persuade Wallace to enter the 1972 presidential sweepstakes as a Democrat rather than an independent.

In May 1971, President Nixon visited Alabama and invited Wallace to ride with him on a flight from Mobile to Birmingham. No one will tell us what the two men said to each other during the plane ride. The subsequent events, therefore, may be merely coincidental.

But not long afterward, the tax case against Gerald Wallace was dropped and George Wallace announced he would run for President as a Democrat, not as an independent.

Low, middle-income housing scene poor

By a 69er

Last week this column reported on the great shortage of low-priced housing for elderly folk and the need for this large segment of the population to vote and "sound off" about it.

This week we note what units of low and middle-income apartments are available. Let's begin with the low income:

First of all, put this down in your little black book — you should expect to wait three to six months after you apply to get into any county home or low-income housing. Every one of them has a lengthy waiting list.

Of course, you may be lucky. Since some people apply at two units (such as Gross Towers and Walnut Manor in Allentown) that wait may not be as long as the waiting list indicates. And then, too, people die and others make different arrangements.

Note also that you must pay in the county homes if you can afford it, so low-income housing often is as good a bet.

Note especially — in low-income housing you are never charged more than 25 per cent of your income for rent. If your only income is $100 in Social Security or pension, your rent will be only $25 a month.

Note further that the top income limit for entrance varies from city to city. In Bethlehem the top income you may have as a single person is $4,500 and $4,800 for a couple. In Easton it is $3,800 and $4,100. In Allentown the single person's income limit now is $4,000 and expected to go up to $5,000. Stroudsburg: $4,100 and $4,400.

In Allentown apply for Gross Towers or Walnut Manor to Allentown Housing Authority, phone: 215-439-8678. In Bethlehem apply for Pfeifle Homes (50 row homes), Litzenburger (100), Bartholomew (75) and Bodder (75) — all apartments — to Bethlehem Housing: 215-865-5319.

In Easton apply to Easton Housing Authority, 215-258-0806, for Harlan House, Walter House or Bushkill House. Also available are 102 other units on three other sites, bringing the total to 300 units. In addition, there are 27 leased homes.

Incidentaly, it may be of interest that Jack Berry, director of Easton Housing, reports that where they have some units for elderly beside those for families, they get more complaints from the elderly than when the elderly are alone. One might expect the opposite to be true.

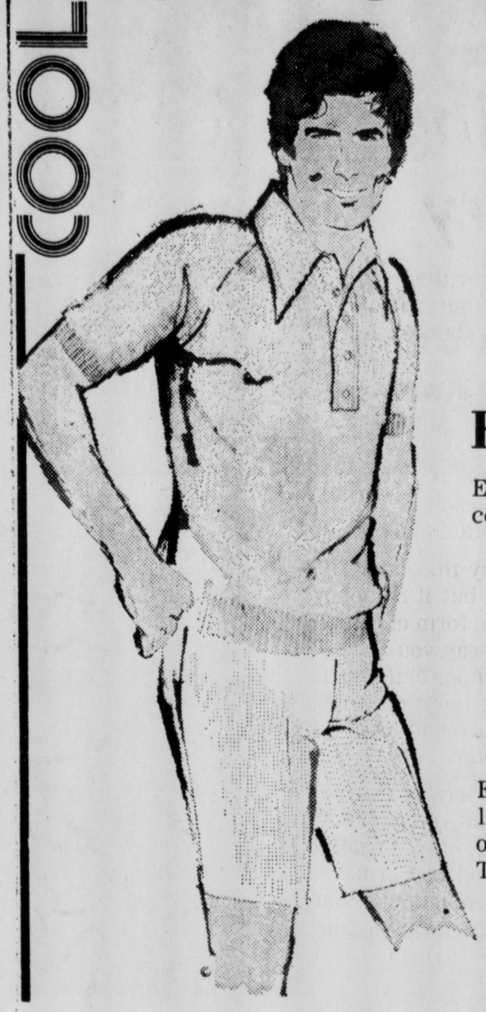

In Stroudsburg, see the Stroudsburg Housing Authority (phone: 717-421-7770) in regard to the one low-income unit, Avon Court.

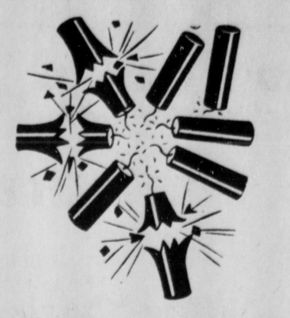

In Carbon County apply for housing help to the new Bureau for the Aging (171-325-3611), or the Carbon County Housing Authority (717-325-3673). This column last week reported the county had no housing authority. However, it does have such an authority although as yet it has been unable to get any low or medium-income housing units. The new county home is completed, but the last section of about 50 rooms is not in use due to the lack of personnel.

Regarding middle-income housing — the supply of this is very limited. Today, in the Lehigh Valley, Allentown has the only housing of this kind — the high-rise Episcopal House (210) and Phoebe Apartments (132). Expect to wait for entrance. A third apartment house soon will be started.

Bethlehem has one under way and a second to begin soon. Easton has one soon to begin.

Mr. and Mrs. James DeAngelo
(John MacLeod)

Susan DeWitt married at noon ceremony

EAST STROUDSBURG — Miss Susan DeWitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alvin DeWitt Jr., of R.D. 1, East Stroudsburg became the bride of James DeAngelo on June 23 at 12 noon at St. Matthew's Catholic Church.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph DeAngelo of 1234 East Centre St., Mahanoy City.

Rev. Dominic Mammarella officiated at the ceremony assisted by Rev. Thomas MacAdam.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an ivory gown in Victorian style with a chapel length train. She wore a matching veil and carried pink daisies and minuet roses.

Matron of honor was Mrs. Diane Zdanek of Phillip, West Va. The bridesmaids were Mary Smith, cousin of the bride and Anne DeWitt, sister of the bride.

The attendants wore pink floral print dresses and matching pink picture hats.

Raymond Gallagher of West Broad St., East Stroudsburg, was best man. Ushers were Anthony Martinelli and Joseph DeAngelo Jr., brother of the bridegroom.

A lawn reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Williams, Shawnee Lake.

After a wedding trip to New England and Nova Scotia, the couple will reside in Wind Gap. The bride was graduated from Elizabethtown College and her husband from East Stroudsburg State College.

Bender-Price rites held

Mr. and Mrs. Gary Bender

CRESCO — Miss Malinda Charlotte Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Price of Cresco, and Gary Eugene Bender, son of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene F. Bender, Mountainhome, were married in the Mountainhome United Methodist Church.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. George H. Curtis before an altar decorated with two bouquets of pink, lavender and white pom pon mums. The aisle candles were decorated with pink and lavender candle rings and netting with streamers. David Price, cousin of the bride, served as acolyte.

Miss Terry Lynn Price, cousin of the bride, provided organ music. Mrs. Lorena Nauman was soloist. She sang: "Love Is A Many Splendored Thing", "More", and "The Lord's Prayer" during the candle-lighted ceremony. Also, a piano and organ duet of "Jesu, Joy of Man's Desiring" was played just prior to the wedding march.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore an empire waisted gown of white peau de soie and alencon lace trimmed with seed pearls. The fitted sleeves ended in two lace tiers. The chapel length train of lace and the peau de soie apron were edged with hand clipped alencon lace. A floral headpiece held her shoulder length veil of French illusion. The bride's attire was designed and fashioned by Mrs. Philip H. Price, sister-in-law of the bride. Bridal bouquet consisted of a white orchid surrounded by a cascade of white pom pon mums.

Mrs. Youndale Seese, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. She wore a floor-length gown of pink peau de soie and chiffon with a bodice of white flocked daisies. The empirewaist was tied with a darker pink satin ribbon ending in streamers down the back. She wore a floral arrangement of pink and white pom pom mums and matching satin ribbon in her hair and carried a colonial bouquet of the same flowers.

Miss Deidre Pensyl, was maid of honor. Bridesmaids were Miss Vicki Adams, niece of the bride, and Miss Shirley Halterman, cousin of the bride.

Junior bridesmaid was Miss Leslie Anglemire, cousin of the bridegroom.

All wore similar gowns of lavender with matching lavender and white headpieces and bouquets of pom pom mums. The attendants' gowns were made by Mrs. Edith Huguenin of Mountainhome.

Bronwyn Beth Price, niece of the bride, was flower girl and wore a floor length gown of white flocked daisies over pink peau de soie with pink chiffon sleeves and an empire waist tied with a darker pink satin ribbon. She carried a basket of pink, lavender and white pom pon mums and also wore a floral headpiece of pom pon mums. Her dress was made by Mrs. Philip H. Price.

Earl Philips of Auburn was best man. Ushers were Robert Sopko of Cresco; Robbie Smith of Mountainhome, cousin of the bridegroom; and Albert J. Seese, Jr., of Cresco, nephew of the bride. Junior usher was John Smith of Mountainhome, cousin of the bridegroom. The ring bearer was Keith Davies of East Stroudsburg, cousin of the bride.

The bride's mother wore a long gown of apricot and floral design with a corsage of green cymbidium orchids. The bridegroom's mother wore a long gown of nile green with a corsage of yellow cymbidum orchids.

Mrs. George Smith, grandmother of the bridegroom, was presented with a white cymbidium orchid corsage, and George Smith, grandfather, with a white carnation boutonniere.

Mrs. Philip H. Price, sister-in-law of the bride, and Mrs. Dolores Adams, sister of the bride, received corsages of red roses. Both the organist and the soloist received corsages of white carnations.

Following the ceremony, Mrs. Malinda Havlik, godmother of the bride, was presented with a white cymbidium orchid corsage at her home, being unable to attend due to illness.

The reception was held in the Crystal Ball Room of the Penn Stroud-Hilton Inn. The tables were decorated with white flower rings and candles. Miss Laurie Brutzman, cousin of the bride, was in charge of the guest book.

The five tier wedding cake was baked by Mrs. Keturah Hartman and decorated with the attendants placed on steps surrounding the cake and the bride and groom under an archway of pink and lavender flowers and white bells. Music was provided by the Pocono Playboys.

The couple are residing in Cresco following a honeymoon trip to Florida.

Anniversary open house

STROUDSBURG — Mr. and Mrs. Howard Buzzard of R.D. 2, Stroudsburg celebrated their golden wedding anniversary on Saturday, June 23 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Kendell Cramer.

Mr. and Mrs. Buzzard, who were married in Philadelphia on June 26, 1923, renewed their wedding vows in a surprise ceremony performed by Rev. L.W. Drury, pastor of the Wesleyan Church, North Fifth St., Stroudsburg.

Mrs. Buzzard wore a light lavendar dress trimmed with lace. Her corsage, a purple orchid, was given to her by a greatniece, Donna "Skeeter" Lyon.

About 70 friends and relatives joined the open house and enjoyed a buffet with an anniversary cake in the shape of a cross made by Mrs. Cramer. A close friend, Mrs. Hazel Marvin, greeted the guests.

Mrs. Rosemary Buzzard served the punch. Wanda Buzzard and Donna Lyon took care of the guest book, a gift from Berneda Buzzard. They received many gifts including a money tree, given to them by the hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Lyon and Mr. and Mrs. Kendall Cramer.

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

Getting back to the Watergate hearings, set me to wondering how long it has been since telephone conversations were considered to be private affairs.

Certainly there was no more efficient bugging operation than the old party line phones where you didn't even have to have a recorder — even if they'd been invented — and didn't need to have anybody on a perpetual listening stint.

When the phone rang, you could tell by the number of rings who was getting a telephone call and judge for yourself whether it was worth stopping whatever you were doing to listen in.

In fact, used judiciously, the party line phone could be a big help in spreading useful bits of information — like who was sick and might appreciate some homemade soup or who was going to town and would be willing to do an errand.

The conference call, which the telephone company consideres a comparatively recent arrangement, could be easily arranged, merely by ringing all the longs and shorts on your line, one after another.

Even after we got sophisticated with two party lines and operators nobody really considered a telephone a private affair. And sometimes an operator could save you considerable time by telling you that the person you were calling was out of town for the day or over at her mother's.

In fact, a telephone was a much more companionable affair in those days and I'm not sure that the privacy and efficiency of dials and recorded messages and mechanical instructions are worth the loss of the feeling of security and friendliness.

Patricia Chopko married

Mr. and Mrs. Terrance P. Szyperski
Jim Gallagher

SWIFTWATER — Miss Patricia Marie Chopko, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Joseph Chopko of Cresco, R.D. 1, became the bride of Terrance Patrick Szyperski, son of Michael Szyperski and Mrs. Henry Bland, Toledo, Ohio, Saturday June 16, at 5:30 p.m. in Saint Mary of the Mount Roman Catholic Church, Mount Pocono.

Msgr. Paul J. Purcell performed the double ring ceremony and nuptial mass. The candelit main altar of the church was banked with pink gladiolas, pink sweetheart roses, white carnations with baby breath. The side altars were accented with the bridal colors. White satin bows marked the pews.

Mrs. Louis DePaul played a selection of organ music. James Becker and young group played Ray Repp's "Missa Bossanova Mass." A portion of the ceremony was written by the bride and groom.

Given marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal length Victorian gown of ivory satin jersey, with Venise lace and seed pearls edging the halter neckline, banding the empire bodice of the A-line skirt and beruffled organza edged long tampered sleeves. A Camelot headpiece of Venice lace embellished with seed pearls held a bouffant tiered veil of silk illusion. The bride carried a cathedral cascade of pink sweetheart roses, white carnations and baby breath with English Ivy.

Mrs. Sally Elterman, Bangor, sister of the bride, was matron of honor. Attired in a ivory Victorian gown flocked with pink roses and trimmed in ivory cotton lace and avocado satin ribbon, accented the fitted bodice and encircled the waist, she wore a headpiece of avocado tiered silk illusion veiling with matching satin streamers and carried a colonial bouquet of pink sweetheart roses and baby breath.

The bridesmaids, Mary Ann Panarello, cousin of the bride and Mary Jane Welter, of Defiance, O. were similarly attired.

Miss Carrie Szyperski, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Szyperski of Toledo, O. was the flower girl. She wore a light pink gown with avocado trim, carrying a basket of pink puff sweetheart roses that matched her flower crown.

Craig Kaminski of Toledo, O., was best man. Ushers were Michael Szyperski, brother of the groom and John Kummero, also of Toledo, O. They wore black Edwardian tuxedos with pink ruffled shirts.

A cocktail party and dinner for 118 guests was held in the Charleston Plaza of Mount Airy Lodge. The bridal table was decorated with pink and avocado flowers and candelabra's. The guest tables were decorated in pink and green. Ron Ashton and Satiniques furnished the music.

The bride's mother wore a long, pink jersey gown trimmed with buttons at the shoulder and gold accessories, and a corsage of pink roses and white carnations. The bridegroom's mother wore a long green chiffon gown with illusion sleeves. She also had a corsage of pink roses and white carnations.

Out of state visitors were from Ohio, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey and Florida.

The bride is a graduate of Pocono Catholic High School and received a Bachelor of Science degree in Biochemistry from Mary Manse College, Toledo, Ohio. She is presently employed by the State of Ohio Department of Health as Institutional Sanitarian.

The bridegroom attended schools in Toledo and received his Bachelor of Arts degree in History from the University of Toledo and is presently employed as a supervisor with Transportation Company in Toledo.

The couple will be making their home in Toledo, Ohio.

Pass trial cost $58,000

ERIE, Pa. (UPI)—It cost approximately $58,000 to prosete former United Mine Workers official Albert Pass for the Yablonski murders and Erie County Controller A.J. Gehrlein said Wednesday that Washington County paid the bill weekly as the trial progressed.

Gehrlein said there was no controversy such as that involving the $90,000 cost of prosecuting another former UMW official, William J. Prater, because Washington County paid the Pass trial bills each week after an audit by one of its representatives.

Pass was convicted of murder June 19 and Prater on March 26 in the New Year's Eve, 1969, slayings of UMW reformer Joseph A. 'Jock" Yablonski, his wife and daughter. Washington County retained original jurisdiction in the case after their trials were transferred to Erie by the Pennsylvania Supreme Court.

Prior to the Pass trial, Gehrlein said, Erie County created a special $50,000 bank account for court expenses and another $7,500 account for special prosecturo Richard Sprague. He said Sprague used only $4,000 and returned $3,500 to Erie County.

Pass is former financial secretary of UMW District 19 from Middlesboro, Ky. Prater is a former District 19 organizer from LaFollette, Tenn.

Berrigan conviction overturned

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — The convictions of antiwar priest Philip Berrigan and his wife, former nun Elizabeth McAlister, for smuggling letters in and out of prison were overturned Wednesday by the 3rd U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals.

The ruling apparently ended the federal government's three-year-old case against the so-called Harrisburg Seven, who were originally accused of conspiring to throw the nation into chaos by bombing underground heating systems in Washington, D. C., and by kidnaping presidential adviser Henry Kissinger.

Of the seven who stood trial in early 1972, only Berrigan and his wife, who were married earlier this month, were found guilty of smuggling letters into and from Lewisburg Federal Penitentiary while awaiting trial.

The appeals court ruled Wednesday that the exchange of letters was not a criminal action because the prison's warden had prior knowledge of the offense through former inmate Boyd Douglas, an FBI informer and chief prosecution witness at the Harrisburg Seven trial.

The court upheld, however, another conviction involving a letter Berrigan sent from the prison without the knowledge of Warden Robert Hendricks, but that conviction was academic since the 50-year-old former Josephite priest was paroled last December.

The reversal also wiped out a one-year prison term imposed on Berrigan's wife and a three-year term she received on two other counts of letter smuggling.

Douglas testified at the trial which lasted from Jan. 21 to April 3, 1972, that he served as a courier between Berrigan and Sister McAlister—with the warden's consent.

Judge Ruggero Aldisert, who wrote the appellate court decision, said no criminal offense had been committed even though it was Berrigan's intent to smuggle letters from the prison without the warden's knowledge and consent.

Supreme Court asked to ban tourist tower

PHILADELPHIA (UPI)—The Commonwealth of Pennsylvania, rebuffed four times in lower courts, asked the state Supreme Court Wednesday to block construction of the Gettysburg tourist tower because it would "desecrate" the environment in violation of the public interest.

"Holding title to property does not give one the right to desecrate the environment," state Attorney General Israel Packel argued.

Packel called on the court to affirm a 1971 constitutional amendment guaranteeing Pennsylvanians a clean environment. The court took the case under advisement.

The 307-foot tower "would be a desecration of the public's natural scenic, historic and aesthetic interests," Packel said. Construction of the modernistic tower overlooking the Gettysburg Battlefield was halted June 8 pending disposition of the Supreme Court appeal.

Jerome H. Gerber, counsel for Maryland developer Thomas M. Ottenstein, maintained the state had failed to produce "clear and convincing proof" for the injunction being sought.

The state has been rejected three times in Adams County Court and also lost an appeal in Commonwealth Court.

Gerber further claimed that Ottenstein would be deprived of due process under the law if denied use of his private property.

The lawyer added that the state suit was discriminatory in violating the 14th Amendment by "singling out for regulation one enterprise in Gettysburg from a host of others."

He noted that commercial properties in the area of the battlefield include a junk yard, four radio transmission antennae, one of them 400 feet high, and an amusement park.

Energy hearings scheduled

PITTSBURGH (UPI) — The Pennsylvania Senate's Environmental Resources Committee will hold a public hearing here today on two bills dealing with the energy crisis and the environment.

The bills, sponsored by vice chairman Franklin L. Kury, D-Northumberland, would create a 14-member Commonwealth Energy Planning Commission and authorize the state Environmental Resources Department to consider all future sites for proposed electric power plants or transmission lines.

Under the first bill, the Commonwealth Energy Planning Commission would be empowered to develop an energy master plan dealing with the allotment of all energy resources in Pennsylvania.

Commission members would include the Pennsylvania secretaries of commerce, community affairs and environmental resources; chairman of the Public Utility Commission; two state representatives chosen by the House Speaker; two senators named by the Senate president pro tem, and six members appointed by the governor.

Three of the gubernatorial appointees would represent the electric, coal and oil and gas industries and the other three would be consumer representatives.

Built in to the legislation was a $100,000 appropriation for administrative expenses.

The Payroll Savings Plan is for people who can't save a buck.
Ever notice how your paycheck sort of slips through your fingers before you get around to stashing a little away for the future?
Ever have a dream about a vacation, or a cottage you want, or a college fund you're going to build for your kids . . . then wake up ten years later just to find out you're no closer to making your dream come true than you were when you first had it?
You're not alone.
Everybody has trouble saving a buck these days. And, that's why there's a Payroll Savings Plan. Sign up where you work and an amount you specify will be set aside from each paycheck and used to buy U.S. Savings Bonds. Before you can get your hands on it. Before you can spend it.
It won't be too long before you have a nice nest egg built up, a bankroll that's really worth something.
Join the Payroll Savings Plan. It's helped a lot of people . . . just like you.

Now E Bonds pay 5½% interest when held to maturity of 5 years, 10 months (4% the first year). Bonds are replaced if lost, stolen, or destroyed. When needed they can be cashed at your bank. Interest is not subject to state or local income taxes, and federal tax may be deferred until redemption.

CANCER

March 21 to April 20 (Aries) — This should be a fruitful day, when some of your more vigorous efforts could bring unexpected rewards and recognition. Romance also favored.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus) — Best results will accrue from working with those who have know-how and inspiration to offer. Solo ventures may not be as successful.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini) — Avoid a tendency toward lethargy. Rewards will be commensurate with the efforts you expend. Keep your own counsel in personal affairs.

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer) — Waste no time getting this day out of the planning stage and into enthusiastic, well-executed action. Any possible obstacle should stimulate you — not annoy.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo) — Put a bit more enthusiasm into efforts. Success can come through new alliances. The "different," if appropriate, could spark day's drive.

Agust 24 to September 23 (Virgo) — Quite unexpectedly, you may be afforded the chance to do something big, attain a new foothold on the ladder to success. Keep alert and ready to act.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra) — What you say and do now could have more far-reaching effects than you realize, so mark time, think things over before acting. NO impulsiveness!

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio) — Reflexes, intuition and business acumen should be keen now. Especially favored under day's aspects: research, merchandising, business transactions in general.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — With your innate ingenuity, you will probably discover more than one novel way of meeting this day's demands. Others are competing for identical goals: Push on!

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn) — Some situations may be getting out of hand. This is the time to use your wits and clear up matters insofar as YOU are personally concerned.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius) — A top day for displaying your canny sense of timing and ability to cut deadwood from your schedule. Some new opportunities in the offing.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces) — A good period. Augment your program with something special, out-of-the-ordinary. Trump competition's move with quiet, tactful skill.

YOU BORN TODAY are an extremely sensitive, compassionate and responsive individual, devoted to home, family and friends.

Here is a pleasant little game that will give you a message every day. It is a numerical puzzle designed to spell out your fortune. Count the letters in your first name. If the number of letters is 6 or more, subtract 4. If the number is less than 6, add 3. The result is your key number. Start at the upper left-hand corner of the rectangle and check every one of your key numbers, left to right. Then read the message the letters under the checked figures give you. 6-28

Opening lead — ace of hearts.

Let's say you're in four spades and West leads the ace of hearts, East following low. West shifts to the duece of clubs, which you win with the ace. How should you play the hand?

As you have bid hearts, it is certain that West's opening lead of the ace is a singleton, and if you were to try a spade finesse at this point and it lost, there would be a substantial danger of West's putting partner on lead with a club and thus negotiating a heart ruff.

Since you can afford a trump loser, a better idea is to forgo the trump finesse and lead the ace an another trump instead. However, this merely improves your chances without actually assuring them. In the actual case you would go down one anyhow.

West would win the second trump lead, play a club to partner's king, and East would deliver the telling blow by returning a heart.

To make the contract, you must lead the king of diamonds at trick three and on it discard the eight of clubs. This entry-destroying play permits West to score a diamond trick he is not entitled to make, in return for a club trick he is entitled to make. It also has the important incidental effect of severing a crucial line of communication between West and East.

West takes the king of diamonds with the ace, but is helpless. Whatever he returns, you win and play the ace and another trump. West winds up scoring three tricks — a spade, a heart and a diamond — and you wind up scoring a game. Your evasive tactics pay a handsome dividend.

Recipients of special services awards included Edward Gallagher, Gouldsboro.

Joseph Raviana, Gouldsboro, was among those cited for submitting adopted suggestion.

James Westrack, Mount Pocono received a 1,500-hour sick leave certificate.

Flood insurance list keeps growing

AVOCA — Two communities each from Monroe and Wayne Counties are among the 53 municipalities in Northeastern Pennsylvania which have been determined eligible for emergency flood insurance.

The information was released by Howard J. Grossman, executive director of the Economic Development Council of Northeastern Pennsylvania (EDCNP).

Eligible to date in Monroe County are the Borough of Stroudsburg and Stroud Township. In Wayne County the eligible communities are the Borough of Honesdale and Palmyra Township.

Grossman said that applications from the 53 municipalities have been received by the Bureau of Planning, Pennsylvania Department of Community Affairs, the statewide coordinating agency for the federal program, and declared eligible by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD).

Under the flood insurance program, initial approval of emergency flood insurance eligibility has been given to the municipalities pending hydrological and actuarial insurance rate studies.

Upon completion of the studies, flood plain management regulations are reviewed and approval of permanent flood insurance eligibility is given.

The entire process involves approximately one and a half years.

In order for a community to qualify for such insurance protection, local elected officials must show in their application the intent to conform to program guidelines.

Municipalities must also adopt a number of ordinances to become eligible to participate in the program.

The deadline for homeowners to apply for the flood insurance program is December 31. After that date, an owner who did not sign up for the program, unless he is a low-income person for whom such a restriction would cause undue hardship, will not be able to get federal disaster relief to the extent he could have had he obtained flood insurance coverage.

Regional communities who require information or assistance in developing their flood insurance application should contact Michael Klein, EDCNP, P.O. Box 777, Avoca.

Two New Jersey persons arrested for theft of calf

BLAIRSTOWN, N.J. — Two New Jersey persons were arrested by the state police at Blairstown, N.J. early Tuesday and charged with the larceny of a calf.

Police arrested Charles V. Giancola, 26 Oak Ridge, N.J. and a 16-year-old juvenile from Columbia, N.J.

The suspects took a calf owned by David Jennen of Frelinghuysen Township near Blairstown, N.J., at 11:50 p.m. Monday accoring to state police. They were both arrested by police about 20 minutes after the alleged crime.

Giancola was arraigned in the Warren County District Court Tuesday and is lodged in the Warren County Jail in Belvidere to await a hearing date.

Records, admissions combine

ESSC offices merge

EAST STROUDSBURG — The offices of student records and admission have been combined at East Stroudsburg State College effective July 1, according to Dr. Darrell Holmes, ESSC president.

Through this administrative reorganization, greater continuity of a student's academic progress will be maintained from the time a student becomes interested in attending ESSC through graduation and entry into the job market.

The combining of these administrative offices streamlines the flow of admissions, registration and records materials which follow a student throughout his or her college years.

Named to serve as associate executive dean of admissions and records has been C. Edward "Bud" Smith, who had formerly served as director of records and registrar.

Named to the position of director of admissions is John H. "Jack" Jones, who had earlier served as assistant director of admissions.

The former admissions director, Dr. Richard H. Luce, had earlier been named head of summer school and continuing education.

Smith joined the ESSC faculty during the fall term of 1970 after serving as assistant registrar at Montana State University and earlier as a research fellow in the Bureau of Institutional Research at the University of Minneosta.

He carries the academic rank of associate professor at ESSC.

Jones joined the college faculty in September 1969 after serving several years as an assistant admissions director at The Pennsylvania State University. Before that time he was an assistant to the dean of men at Bloomsburg State College.

Youth program offered

EAST STROUDSBURG — The Salvation Army is offering a summer Youth Center Program supervised by Pat Bond and Deb Perry, who are working through the East Stroudsburg State College Psychology Internship Program.

The program will be divided into three age groups that will meet during the following times: 13 and older, 7 to 10 p.m. Monday; ages seven to ten, 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Wednesday and ages 11 and older 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Thursday.

Swim trips, hiking, games, sports, special events trips and field days are planned activities for the summer.

The youth center activities will run through the school year until May 30, 1974. A nominal fee for a year's membership will be charged.

DER to file complaint in sewage dumping case

By RUTH VINCE
Pocono Record Reporter

TOBYHANNA — Larry Sattler, field representative of the State Department of Environmental Resources, made an on site inspection Wednesday morning of the field where Mt. Airy Lodge is alleged to have dumped raw sewage from its treatment plant.

Barry Nauman, hauler from Mount Pocono, told Coolbaugh Twp. police Tuesday he had been contracted by Herman Martens, owner of Mt. Airy, to haul sewage from the resort to the site.

Nauman and his driver, Perry Fulmer, were stopped Tuesday on the property owned by Mt. Airy, located off Rte. 196 in Coolbaugh Township, as they were bringing in two truckloads of sewage, allegedly ready to dump it in the field.

Township Police Chief Joseph Gerrity was alerted by Ambrose Vince, property owner and resident in Coolbaugh. Gerrity and Lloyd Knecht, township supervisor, were on the site when Nauman arrived.

Questioned on the site, Nauman said Martens told him to dump there.

Sattler, upon inspection of the field, found dried sewage over an extensive area of the field. He said, "I've been trying to catch haulers dumping for two months."

Persons dumping solids in open land must have a permit according to Sattler, and solids must be plowed under.

Sattler further stated that to his knowledge no one in Monroe County has this kind of permit because it can't be used year-round. Weather conditions interfere with the the plowing and it can't be done in the winter.

"With the heavy rains this spring and summer, it couldn't be done anyway, so no permits could be issued," he added.

Sattler said he will file a complaint and it will be turned over to Ralph Kates, of Philadelphia, attorney for DER. Kates will determine if this is a court case or whether it will be heard before a district magistrate.

Sattler could not state how soon action would be taken.

Coolbaugh Township has an ordinance which states all dumping a rubbish and refuse materials are prohibited in the township.

According to a section of the ordinance, rubbish means all waste materials not included in garbage and ashes.

Gerrity and Knecht said the township could cite Mt. Airy but since it was established as sewage, it would be in DER's area and they will handle it.

Herman Martens Wednesday said "to his knowledge only sludge from Mt. Airy's plant has been dumped on the 180-acre former Simpson farm."

"If there is raw sewerage dumped there, it didn't come from Mt. Airy," Martens said. "If Nauman is dumping raw sewage there I want to know where it's coming from," he added.

Martens also said three weeks ago he contacted John Yash, who is in charge of solid wastes at DER in Kingston and inquired about using the farm to dump sludge.

When asked if he had a permit to dump at the farm, he said, "that's what I called Yash about." "I haven't heard anything yet."

No one at DER was available for comment.

Martens said he had Nauman under contract for about a year or a year and a half and the treatment plant is pumped every two months or when needed.

Martens further stated he bought the farm to dump the sludge there. The farm was purchased in 1968. He said there is no water or animals up there.

However, there is a pond on the property and cattle had been seen there until about one month ago when they got away and were seen in the township.

Martens said there are no animals there now and the pond is only about a half acre in size.

The pond is located about 300 to 400 feet from where the dumping is taking place. Martens said he had the pond pumped to get clay out of it.

When asked if he was aware that the pond fed into a stream which flows into Lynch's Pond at Camp Tegawitha, a girls' camp in Coolbaugh Township, Martens said "no comment."

Waste solution proposed

EAST STROUDSBURG — A Connecticut firm has contacted the Monroe County General Authority about a solution to the county's solid waste problem which does not require a landfill.

Environmental Control Sciences Corp., Bethel, Conn., is trying to sell the county on a rotary feed incinerator, which first shreds waste and proceeds to burn the reduced trash four times.

Ash and non-burnable metals sorted from the waste are recycled, rather than dumped in a landfill site, according to Murray Varrese sales representative.

The authority, chairman Donald Gage, has asked the company to forward additional literature on its product.

Varrese explained the company would finance construction, supplying a one-year performance bond to the county. However, it would ask the county for three to four acres of land to put the incinerator on.

Gage said the proposal is only one of many the authority has received.

"We're contacted almost daily by businessmen involved in solid waste disposal," Gage said.

The authority, according to Gage is investigating "any and all" disposal methods.

Authority members visited an incineration site in Harrisburg Friday, while a Massachusetts company has invited them to inspect installations in that state.

Lehigh Valley Composting has also approched the authority with their plans for solid waste disposal.

P.M. school board adopts $4 million district budget

SWIFTWATER — The Pocono Mountain Board of School Directors Wednesday approved a $4,449,863 school district budget for 1973-74.

The board also approved resolutions dropping district real estate tax millage from 49 mills collected in 1972-73 to 37 mills for 1973-74 and renewing the district one per cent realty transfer tax.

The tax millage was dropped because reassessment has increased property values throughout the district. For this reason also, the district dropped its per capita tax this year.

The real estate tax at 37 mills is expected to bring in $2,748,375 in revenue funds in 1973-74. The realty transfer tax should supply an additional $135,000 to the district.

The $4,449,863 district budget shows an increase of $650,359, or 17 per cent, over the 1972-73 budget of $3,799,504.

The largest percentage of the budget will go for instruction costs, including salaries and materials. This figure is $2,126,441 — over $200,000 more than the allocation for this category last year.

Other allocations include $109,875 for administration; $389,049 for plant operation; $302,500 in fixed charges; $597,000 in debt service charges; $211,000 in outgoing transfers; and $87,586 for pupil services.

Also, $52,790 for health services; $40,638 for student activities; $8,500 for food services; $3,000 for community services; and $40,000 for a budgetary reserve.

Capital outlay costs — investments, construction payments — nearly doubled in the 1973-74 budget, from $87,796 last year to $166,874.

The only budget item which decreased was transportation services, which dropped from $304,439 in 1972-73 to $293,710.

In other business, the board:

— Approved salary increments for district maintenance personnel and custodians of $600 for those with less than five years service and $900 for those with more than five years.

— Approved pay boosts totaling $1,100 for the district's two mechanics. Board member Robert Reed voted no on both the custodians' and mechanics' schedules, saying he felt they were not high enough.

— Approved increments for clerical personnel following the same formula as that used for custodians and approved increases for cafeteria workers of 35 cents per hour for managers, 25 cents for cooks and up to 25 cents for helpers.

State lacks policy

Action urged for elderly

By GARY GROSSMAN
Pocono Record Reporter

SWIFTWATER — Pennsylvania is still without a policy providing social services for its elderly despite statistics proving one is needed, Robert Benedict, director of the Welfare Department's Bureau for the Aging said Wednesday.

"We are going to have to think of social services for the aged on parity with our thinking on public education for the young," Benedict told delegates of the Pennsylvania State Association of County Commissioners at Mt. Airy.

Leading a slate of speakers during the third full day of the week-long convention, Benedict gave a statistic-laden address to prove the need for more services.

"We need to get away from a single grant-in-aid program," Benedict said. "We cannot run a community based program from Harrisburg. The central focus is going to have to be on services in their own home."

Representing a major shift in the nature of the state's population, Benedict said," we have added whole new generations to families" with modern medicine and an emphasis on zero population growth.

Deep proverty, minimal education and loneliness plague the state's elderly citizens, Benedict said.

He rattled off statistics: 300,000 Pennsylvanians over 65 are living below the poverty level; 75,000 over 80 reported a total net worth of less than $1,000; 54 per cent reported being lonely, (some not having talked directly to another human being in "several weeks.")

Sixty-three per cent of the aged have less than eight years of education hindering their ability to take advantage of services already available. Benedict said 85 per cent of all property tax rebate forms filled out by the elderly had to be returned because of errors.

"Politically speaking, I think there is no turning back," Benedict said.

Lehigh County Commissioner George Stahl stood following Benedicts speech to say it is "time to demand action."

Stating enough proposals have been heard, Stahl said action was needed to provide a program of low cost institutional care for the elderly.

He said an $8 million wing added to Lehigh's county home was filled well in advance of completion.

"There's not a man in this room who can afford $600 a month to keep their parents in one of these places," Stahl concluded.

Miss Patricia Cameron, director of the Monroe County Office for the Aging, was present at the convention.

She said the county's fledgling office is involved in contacting social service agencies in preparation of referral services to the elderly.

Other speakers at the convention included Joseph F. Cockerman on the state's Drug and Alcohol program, Richard Bartholomew on manpower and special revenue sharing, James A. Green on election procedures and John Felice and Henry Ewalt on labor relations.

S-burg planners oppose vacated gasoline stations

STROUDSBURG — Members of the Stroudsburg Planning and Zoning Commission joined the ancient philosophers Wednesday in debating the age-old question: What is beauty?

Commission member Dr. Bruce Dunlop led the discussion by offering two recommendations to the Borough Council, one passed and one defeated, that concerned the undesirability of vacated gas stations and an ordinance prohibiting construction of any new advertising signs in the borough.

Dunlop's motion on forbidding new advertising signs died when it failed to be seconded by any of his fellow commission members.

Several of Dunlop's colleagues felt that more time should be given to an in-depth study of the sign situation in Stroudsburg before any immediate action was taken.

Consultant Victor Rodite pointed out that the sign ordinance already in effect limited construction of any new signs to commercial and industrial districts.

"Signs in existence before the ordinance was passsed are non-conforming signs and are allowed to remain under present conditions," he said.

Dunlop voiced strong concern over advertising signs located on Rte. 80 near the western end of Stroudsburg and signs on Broad Street and the Main Street - Ann Street area.

Rodite noted most of these signs either had variances or were nonconforming structures. He noted the state is in the process of paying billboard owners to remove their signs along Interstate Rte. 80.

Dunlop's proposal on preventing the rampant outcropping of vacated gas stations was passed, however, and called for oil companies that plan to construct new stations to first conform to special use provisions of the local zoning ordinance.

In so doing, the companies must furnish to the planning and zoning board a statistical analysis of why a station should be built in a specific neighborhood. The planning commission would forward such information to the borough council for action.

In other business, the planning commission consented to co-operate with the Stroudsburg Business Assn. in constructing suggestion boxes and participating in traffic surveys in relation to Sidewalk Days scheduled for Aug. 1, 2, and 3.

Rape attempt reported

SAYLORSBURG — State police at Stroudsburg reported an unidentified white male attempted to rape a 51-year-old woman and a 14-year-old girl at a Saylorsburg area home at 4 a.m. Wednesday.

Trooper Alfred Drozdowski said the woman's screams frightened the man away. They told police they could not give a description of the man.

Police said he gained access to the home through an unlocked window.

Stroud Township and Stroudsburg police reported there were at least four rapes in the last three weeks.

Stroudsburg Police Chief John Baujan said a 74-year-old woman was raped in the borough June 12. Three other rapes were reported in Stroud Township.

59 county residents hit lottery

HARRISBURG — Fifty-nine Monroe County residents won $4,120 from May 30 to June 12 in the state's 50 cent lottery, according to the Bureau of State Lotteries.

Eleven were $200 winners, with the rest winning $40 apiece.

The accumulated number of winners is 1,702, with the accumulated total prizes at $177,130.

In the Lucky 7 game, 24 residents won $1,200 in the same period. The total winners in this category are 725, with the accumulated prizes at $36,250.

Mid-school program scheduled

STROUDSBURG — A workshop team of instructors and consultants will present a program on middle schools to elementary and secondary teachers of the Stroudsburg School District and the public at 7 p.m. today.

The program, in the large group instructional room of the Stroudsburg Junior High School, will provide the opportunity for interested persons to have questions answered regarding the operation of the district's new middle school under construction in Stroud Township.

Twenty members of the district instructional staff are involved in the two-week workshop. Robert Bumpus, director of two middle schools in Decatur, Ala., is the instructional leader of the workshop.

Bumpus, who visited the Stroudsburg district in March to conduct in-service training seminars on middle schools, was joined this week by a five-member team of interdisciplinary instructors from his home district who will serve as workshop instructors.

U.S. know-how brought trade pact with Russia

STROUDSBURG — Superior American economic know-how brought the Soviet Union to the United States for trade and corporate development.

Jean Tartter, deputy director of the Office of East-West Trade in the Bureau of Economic Affairs, State Department, gave this opinion Wednesday to the Kiwanis Club.

Russia, Tartter said, is far behind the United States in production of things most Americans take for granted — a car in every garage, electrical appliances, even summer shirts.

Marxist ideology governing Russia, Tartter explained, is responsible for economic trouble in the country.

Under the governmental system, all economic planning is done through a central office. No incentives for workers are provided, Tartter said, because, according to Marx, "one worker shouldn't earn more than the rest."

Because of central planning, the Soviet Union has made some bad mistakes, according to Tartter.

"They produce more steel than we do, but they're way behind in use of new materials to replace steel to which America has turned," said Tartter.

A Muscovite can't buy a summer shirt, but coat hangars and irons can be had for a song because of a poor economic decision, according to Tartter.

Lack of wage incentives, but fear of punishment if production quotas are not met, prohibits quality in many products.

For example, Russian glass workers have so many meters of windows to produce in a specified time. They may meet the quota, but produce glass so thin that half of it breaks before it gets into a window frame, Tartter said.

Russians, now conscious of their problems, are seeking American aid. Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev invited 40 corporation heads to lunch with him during his recent American visit.

Unit 20 directors approve $3.7 million '73 budget

NAZARETH — Colonial Northampton Intermediate Unit 20 directors Wednesday night approved a $3.7 million special education budget for next year.

There was little public discussion of the figure, up from the $2,666,274 budget for this year. It passed by a 9-2 vote, with Lloyd Manter and Jim Price dissenting.

Instructional costs at $2,245,837 show a nearly 23 per cent hike, accounting for the largest single rise. The budget for next year was compiled on a 15-month formula.

In another matter, directors agreed to shift Dr. John Abbruzzese from assistant executive director to director of special education. His salary was set at $23,500.

A request by Joseph Mamana, former assistant superintendent at Easton, to be hired fulltime to coordinate non-puplic school aid was tabled 6-5. Mamana, a parttime employe, then resigned.

Gas theft suspect arrested

STROUDSBURG — A Marshalls Creek man was arrested by Stroud Township police Tuesday and charged with a theft at E.M. Rinehart, Inc., 1875 W. Main St.

Ray R. Sheerer, 23, was charged with the theft of gas from the auto dealer's gas pump on the side of the building.

Police said Sheerer had apparently fled the scene on foot early Tuesday when a Stroud Township squad car stopped at the building.

Sgt. James Carey said Sheerer had removed a gas panel from the pump to get the fuel. Sheerer left his car, a 1964 chevrolet sedan, at the pump.

Carey said the suspect reported the car was stolen late Tuesday afternoon.

However, further investigation showed Sheerer's boot print matched those taken from the gas panel.

Eastburg renewal project given $2.2 million grant

WASHINGTON, D. C. — A $2.2 million grant was awarded the Redevelopment Authority of Monroe County Wednesday for the Courtland Plaza urban renewal project in East Stroudsburg.

The authority has been working for the grant from the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for almost two years.

The project consists of 32 acres in the central portion of the borough. Approximately 17 acres are residential; about 100 housing units are involved.

Plans for the plaza call for 55 units to be torn down and the remaining 46 housing units to be rehabilitated. The area will be free from all dilapidated housing.

South Kistler Street will be relocated east of the railroad tracks and a cul-de-sac built south of Penn Street to provide better division of traffic at the intersection.

Fire number

BUSHKILL — A new emergency fire number, 424-2400, has been installed for the Bushkill Fire Department. Chief Robert Rohner has requested residents use the new number when dialing fire calls.

Fastest Schaefer 500 field ever finally filled

LONG POND — Since he came to Pocono International Raceway last week, Jerry Karl has experienced nothing but trouble.

The Manchester, Pa. resident, who drives a revolutionary turbocharged Chevrolet, hit the wall during practice for Sunday's Schaefer 500, crashed again during his first qualification attempt and caught fire in his second try.

But Wednesday Karl, who drives an Eagle prepared by Smokey Yunick, who proclaims himself the owner of "the best damned garage" in Daytona Beach, Fla., turned in the second fastest time of the day to get into the field.

A total of nine cars competed for the remaining six positions for the 1 p.m. start.

Veteran Dick Simon became the 24th driver to qualify at 180 miles an hour to gain the inside of the 11th row for the fastest Schaefer 500 in history. He qualified at 180.054.

The average qualifying speed for the field is 183.599 mph. Last year, paced by Bobby Unser, the 33 qualified at 177.328 mph. The inaugural race averaged 165.499 in time trials.

Simon, a Salt Lake City, Utah insurance executive, became the 33rd qualifier at 1:06 p.m. He had two laps at 180 or better.

Karl posted consistent laps and qualified at 179.372 mph, bumping Larry McCoy of Levittown, Pa., who had come in at 173.019. McCoy was the second driver to be dumped from the field.

He pushed out Bentley Warren, who had qualified at 172.538 in a car assigned to Lee Brayton. McCoy is the second alternate to the race.

Easton's Al Loquasto is the first alternate. He qualified at 174.970 mph in the car in which Mark Donohue won the 1971 Indianapolis 500.

Bob Harkey, who replaced Bill Simpson in a Vollstedt-Offy, rounds out the 11th row with a 178.900.

Probably the most popular entrant to get into the field was Jim Hurtubise, the last holdout for the front-engine car. Hurtubise, who did not make last year's field after qualifying 31st in the inaugural race, posted a 177.226 to end in the middle of the final row.

Ahead of him is John Martin, who had a 177.322. Rounding out the field is Mel Kenyon with a 176.730.

The biggest disappointment in the final day of qualifications, which was postponed three days due to heavy rain Sunday, was young Tom Sneva.

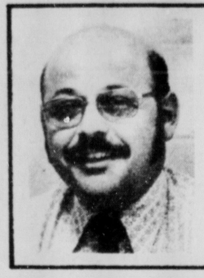

Sneva, a 25 - year - old bachelor from Sprague, Wash., posted three laps in the 176 mph range which might have put him in the field, lost power in his Kingfish-Offy on the final lap and coasted across the finish line. The final lap of 152.310 lowered his 10-lap average to 169.803.

This year's field, which will be shooting for a $400,000 purse, posted such higher qualifications speeds than last year that the speeds posted by the last five starters would not have made Sunday's field.

The entire field surpassed Donohue's 1971 pole position of 172.393.

Peter Revson will sit on the pole Sunday with an average of 190.648. Al Unser and Mario Andretti, two-thirds of the quick "Super Team," round out the front row, both at better than 190 mph.

All the drivers in the field, plus the two alternates, spent the remainder of Wednesday in their final practice laps before the race.

Phillies, Mets split

NEW YORK (UPI) — Mike Schmidt drove in five runs with two home runs, including a grand slammer in a five-run sixth inning Wednesday night, enabling the Philadelphia Phillies to defeat the New York Mets 7-1 after losing the opener of their doubleheader, 7-6.

Pitcher George Stone and batterymate Ron Hodges hit two-run singles as the Mets sent 12 men to bat and scored seven runs on nine hits in the first inning of the opening game.

Cubs defeat Expos, 6-1; darkness halts nightcap

CHICAGO (UPI) — Ron Santo drove in four runs and scored the other two to spark the Chicago Cubs to a 6-1 victory over the Montreal Expos in the first game of a doubleheader Wednesday, then homered in the ninth inning to tie the second game which was suspended because of darkness with the score 3-3 after 12 innings.

The second game will be completed prior to the start of today's regularly-scheduled game.

Montreal had gone ahead 3-2 in the top of the ninth of the second game when Ron Hunt's bases - loaded infield single scored Ken Singleton, but Santo hit ninth homer of the year with one out in the bottom of the ninth.

The Expos, trailing 2-0, had tied it with consecutive bases-empty homers in the seventh inning by Bob Bailey and Singleton.

Chicago scored in the first inning when Rick Monday singled, went to third on two infield outs and sprinted home on Mike Torrez' wild pitch, and in the sixth on a bases-empty homer by rookie Pat Bourque.

A.L.'s hottest hitter helps Birds top Yanks

BALTIMORE (UPI) — Paul Blair, the hottest hitter in the American League in the last month, slammed a home run and a double, driving in two runs, to back Dave McNally's shutout pitching as the Baltimore Orioles beat the New York Yankees 4-0 Wednesday night.

Blair, batting .435 since May 29 to raise his average from .218 to .321—he's 23-for-43 in the last 11 games—blasted a solo home run in the first inning off loser Fritz Peterson, his fourth, before the Orioles chased the Yankee lefty in the third inning with their final two runs.

Mark Belanger singled in the third inning and moved up on a ground ball. Blair's two-out double scored Belanger and designated hitter Tommy Davis singled Blair across.

Davis slammed a two-out solo homer in the eighth inning for the final run.

O'Donnell quits PM cage job

SWIFTWATER — Joseph O'Donnell, hired just three weeks ago by the Pocono Mountain School District as varsity basketball coach at Pocono Mountain High School, has changed his mind and decided not to take the job.

Hired June 13, the social studies teacher in the Dallas school district informed the Pocono Mountain School Board of his decision in a note to acting Superintendent James Davenport earlier in the week.

O'Donnell's note said simply he had decided to remain in his current position, said Davenport. O'Donnell, who holds a master's degree from the University of Scranton, was selected over 15 other applicants at the time a coach was needed. Now the search resumes.

Rookie tabs 4-3 victory for Rangers

ARLINGTON, Tex. (UPI) — Rookie David Clyde, making his major league debut after being the Texas Ranger' and major league baseball's top pick in the June free agent draft, went five innings Wednesday night to earn his first major league victory, a 4-3 win over the Minnesota Twins.

Clyde, a Texas schoolboy who was the most sought-after player in many years to come out of the high school ranks, struck out seven and walked six as he allowed just a second inning home run by Bobby Adams before being relieved by Bill Goglewski in the sixth inning.

Overseeing measures may curb NFL injury plague

NEW YORK (UPI) — Commissioner Pete Rozelle wrapped up the "newsworthy" end of the National Football League meetings Wednesday by announcing a list of preventive measures in the hopes of curtailing the number of player injuries next season.

"We have been conducting an extensive study of player injuries—both on natural and artificial turf — with nearly every injury from 1969 through 1972 being examined to determine its cause," Rozelle said.

Rozelle disclosed that the findings of the study showed "no difference between artificial and natural turf in regard to major injuries," but that when minor injuries were included, "artificial turf had a poorer safety record because of less severe abrasions, contusions and sprains."

Rozelle also said that reports on equipment issued to players will be requested from all 26 clubs because of frequent injuries resulting from a player choosing not to wear proper pads, etc.

In addition, other findings by the study were a greater percentage of injuries were received by quarterbacks and running backs and that most injuries occurred during the third quarter.

"We are going to take steps that we hope will cut down on second half injuries," Rozelle said. "The most significant being that we will institute a slightly longer halftime so that players will have more time to warm up again.

Rozelle said the meetings will conclude today, "but I don't forsee any other newsworthy developments."

Nastase advances in Wimbledon

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Ilie Nastase of Romania, the number one seed —and number one target of boycotting professionals —won through to the last 32 of the men's singles of the Wimbledon Tennis Championships Wednesday in a match in which he appeared to suffer a slight recurrence of a back strain.

The strain seemed to clear up after the Romanian dropped the second set and he demolished Ivan Molina of Colombia 6-2, 7-9, 7-5, 6-1 to the relief of Wimbledon officials whose big draw he became when some 70 professionals refused to play in the tournament after Nikki Pilic of Yugoslavia was banned.

Nastase, who had a heavy fall at Queen's Club last Saturday, rubbed his back, stretched and twisted in the second set to ease his back, let out a notch in the third and then, satisfied that it would stand up to his usual power game, cut loose with everything he had in the third set.

Fifth-seeded Jimmy Connors of Belleville, Ill., also won through to the last 32 in a match of big but inconsistent hitters with David Lloyd of Britain. With both men spraying errors around the court, Connors won 6-4, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2 simply because he was able to steady down more often than the volatile Briton who was so convinced the net was too low he twice insisted on measuring it personally.

Top-seeded Margaret Court of Australia, who spent three days last week sleeping on a board for a strained back, took no risks in beating her countrywoman Karen Krantzcke 6-2, 6-3.

The regal Australian one missed a few that she would have lunged for in other days but she has always overpowered the six-foot Miss Krantczke in the past, knows her slow-footed limitations and paced the match so she suffered the minimum of strain.

Wimbledon is the third leg of the tennis grand slam and Miss Court, aiming to be the first woman to achieve it twice said: "The French title is the tough one to win but Wimbledon is the important one. I'm not counting on the Forest Hills title in September at this stage."

There were 25,000 in the grounds and more coming in all the time despite misty cloudy weather and a sprinkle of rain that held up the start of play for 20 minutes when Miss Court, with the Australian and French titles under her belt, opened play against Miss Krantzcke.

Miss Krantzcke played as though she didn't know that Mrs. Court did not have her old mobility. It was not until well into the second set that she essayed her first lob, a shot that kept the top seed back from her dangerous post at the net. Miss Court got the winning service break to 3-1 in the first set and to 4-2 in the second.

Miss Court has won the Wimbledon title three times, the last time during her first Grand Slam three years ago.

Today's high attendance, following yesterday's record for the second day of more than 25,000, delighted Wimbledon officials, no longer worried that the boycott of the tourney by some 70 members of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP) would hurt the gate.

"I am certain that the committee's action in standing out against the players' boycott has been justified," said the chairman of the All-England Club, Herman David.

In women's first round singles, three Americans, Patti Hogan, Laura Dupont and Kristie Kemmer all notched up victories.

Miss Hogan of La Jolla, Calif., recovered and fought hard to beat South Africa's tenacious Cynthia Doerner, 7-9, 6-4, 6-4, Miss Dupont of Charlotte, N.C. demolished Hideko Goto of Japan 6-2, 6-2 and Miss Kemmer, the left-hander from Los Angeles, breezed past Australia's Helen Gourlay 6-1, 6-3.

Jimmy Connors, the men's fifth seed from Belleville, Ill., defeated David Lloyd of Britain in a contest of big but inconsistent hitters 6-4, 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

The southpaw American did not have his usual control of his two-handed backhand and dropped the third set on a long string of errors to the delight of the standing-room only center court hoping for a chance to cheer a hometown winner.

Connors got the winning service break in the final game of the first set with a magnificent passing shot down the sidelines at set point. He broke through again in the second set at 4-2 on errors by the Briton who seemed convinced all through the match that the net was too low and twice insisted on measuring it himself.

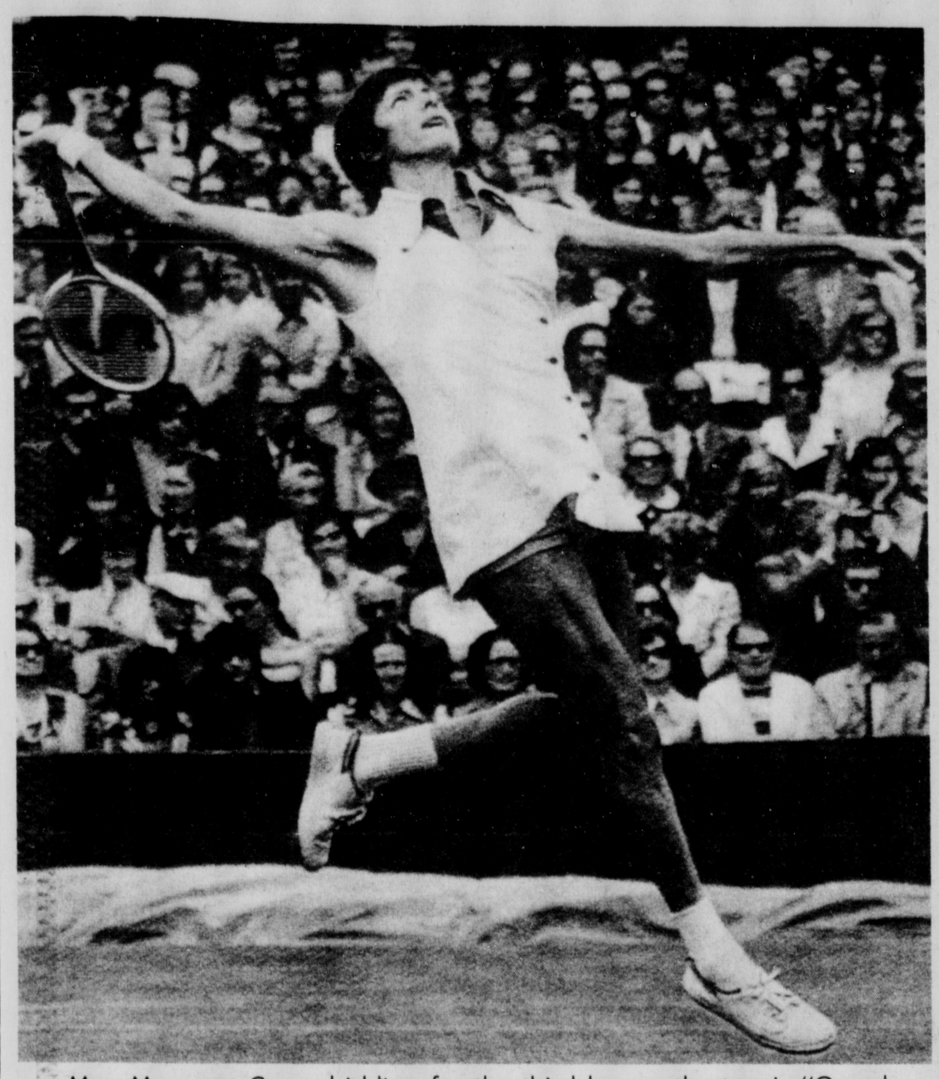

Connors broke service to open the final set with lobs and was never headed.

Sweden's 17-year-old Bjorn Borg, the sixth seed, also came through to the last 32 of the men's singles, beating Patrice Hombergen 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

Hans Pohmann of Germany took time to get his two-handed backhand and powerful service to work effectively in the heavy conditions.

But when he did he finished too strong for Mexican Marcelo Lara and won 2-6, 7-5, 2-6, 6-1, 7-5.

Jurgen Fassbender, the German No. 8 seed, was plagued by an erratic service which kept Jose Moreno of Spain in the game throughout their three-set match.

Mrs. Margaret Court, bidding for the third leg on the tennis "Grand Slam," keeps her eye on the ball Wednesday before returning it back across the net. She beat opponent and countrywoman Karen Krantzke in women's singles round at Wimbledon. (UPI Wirephoto)

Large field gets ready for today's Western Open

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wholesale revision of golf's top money winners for 1973 ought to come in the $175,000 Western Open beginning today, and leading money winner Bruce Crampton should boost his lead on the field as well as becoming golf's fifth "millionaire."

Crampton, already the winner of four tournaments this year, a feat equalled only by Jack Nicklaus so far, was one of the favorites in the field of 147 and was given a good chance to win the pro tour's event for the second straight week for the second time this year.

He has won $204,209 this year and $995,652 in his golf career and thus could join Arnold Palmer, Nicklaus, Billy Casper and Lee Trevino as the only players ever to earn over $1 million on the course by finishing tenth or higher. First prize will be $35,000, second $19,950, third $12,425 and fourth $8,225.

Revision of the top ten in the money winning standings should come because only three of the top 10 will compete in the event, Crampton, Trevino, now No. 4, and Gay Brewer, No. 9. The other seven, Nicklaus, Tom Weiskopf, Lanny Wadkins, National Open champion Johnny Miller, Dave Hill, Open runner-up John Schlee, and Chi Chi Rodriguez, were not in the field.

However, such luminaries as Palmer, Homero Blancas, Julius Boros, Forrest Fezler, Brian Allin and defending champion Jim Jamieson were rated as title challengers.

Casper, the only player ever to win the Western three times, will be trying for a repeat victory on the course where he last won the crown, in 1969. But playing conditions should be vastly different since four years ago it rained for three of the four tournament days.

Then only four players broke par of 284 for 72 holes on the 6,654 yard course headed by Casper with 276.

There was little threat of rain in the forecast this week and there has been little rain recently, so the rough should pose no major penalty on wild shots, the greens should hold well, and putt fast.

However, the greens were expected to be a problem for every player since the speed will not be consistent on each green and each has numerous rolls and twists putting a premium on accuracy as well as touch.

Each green also is well trapped to put a premium on approach shots.

There will be television of the third and fourth rounds of the event Saturday and Sunday after the field has been cut at the end of 36 holes. Should there be a tie after 72 holes, there will be a sudden death playoff.

Shull records Shawnee ace

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — Christy Shull recorded a hole-in-one Wednesday when he hit his tee shot on the 170-yard, number two hole of the white nine at Shawnee Country Club into the hole.

Playing in a foursome with Shull were Bob Weichel, Glen Richards and Thomas Cawley.

Mrs. Court overcame back woes

WIMBLEDON, England (UPI) — Margaret Court Wednesday showed none of the signs of an injured back that have kept her out of tennis for 10 days with back trouble when she reached the last 32 in the women's singles at Wimbledon Wednesday.

Mrs. Court, top seed to win the title for a fourth time, eased through with a 6-2, 6-3 win against fellow Australian Karen Krantzcke and took a step nearer becoming the first woman ever to win the tennis grand slam of the Australian, French, Wimbledon and Forest Hills titles twice.

"Going for the slam has kept me keen again this year," said Mrs. Court. "I think I need an incentive to play really well these days.

"When I am in a big tournament I can hardly wait to play and certainly during the past year or so I have been more relaxed than I have ever been.

"I also love playing at Wimbledon most of all. When you go for the slam, the French title is the toughest one to win. But Wimbledon is the big one—the tournament every player most wants to win," said Mrs. Court.

Two 'rebels' had agreed to boycott

AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — The president of the Association of Tennis Professionals (ATP), says two participants in the Wimbledon tournament had agreed before hand to join a boycott over a dispute with the International Lawn Tennis Federation (OLTF).

Cliff Drysdale produced a petition signed by 70 players who agreed not to play in any tournament in which Yugoslavia's Nikki Pilic, who was suspended by the ILTF, was not allowed to play. Romania's Ilie Nastase and England's Roger Taylor, both of whom are playing in the Wimbledon tournament, were on the list.

Drysdale, first president of the year-old players union, said the ATP decided to boycott Wimbledon and all other tournaments in which Pilic was barred when the ILTF upheld the Yugoslavia national federation suspension of Pilic.

Pilic was suspended for competing in the ATP tournament in Las Vegas rather than the early rounds of Davis Cup play.

Late trading boosts market

Stocks begin slow climb

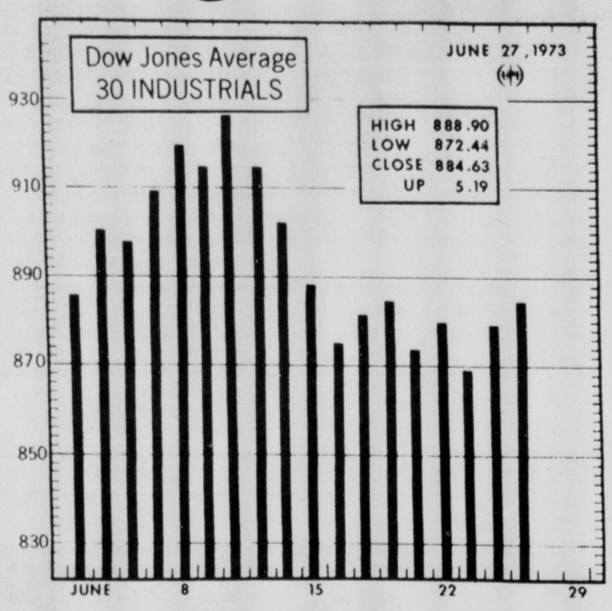

NEW YORK (UPI) — A modest rally in the last trading hour Wednesday—almost identical to Tuesday's late technical upsurge—pushed stocks a bit higher in slow trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

The Dow Jones industrial average rose 5.19 to 884.63. Standard & Poor's 500 stock index gained 0.32 to 103.62. The average price of a NYSE common share advanced 11 cents.

Advances were only narrowly ahead of declines, 717 to 594, among 1,746 issues traded.

Turnover slackened to 12,600,000 shares, compared with 14,040,000 shares Tuesday. Apparently, word from the Commerce Department that its composite index of leading economic indicators had risen 1.5 per cent in May, against an April decline of 1.7 per cent, was not enough to coax investors away from the sidelines.

Some analysts feel the market may have bottomed out temporarily at around the Dow 875-880 level. Lucien Hooper of W.E. Hutton pointed out the market has resisted declines in the past two sessions, even with the dollar sliding, and John Dean testifying at the Watergate hearings. "These days, it's a victory if stocks don't go down," Hooper said. "The market's been declining now for about six months, and that's about as long as we ever stay down."

Most observers said however, there is little in the news to encourage a sustained upswing. Many agree the biggest headache on Wall Street is an increasing number of reports from industry analysts and company spokesmen that predict lower corporate profits in the near and immediate term, due in part to inflation, and to President Nixon's 60-day price freeze.

Levitz Furniture was the volume leader, unchanged at 5¼. Addressograph-Multigraph was second and lost ⅜ to 12⅛ on 423,100 shares, including a 396,700-share block at 11½. Norton-Simon followed, and fell ¾ to 22⅝ on 209,300 shares.

Prices on the American Stock Exchange posted small gains in light trading. The Amex index rose 0.03 to 22.25. Volume came to 2,310,000 shares, compared with 2,330,000 shares Tuesday.

Can South Vietnam survive? Officials think so

By BERT OKULEY

SAIGON (UPI) — Can South Vietnam, crippled by a quarter century of war, emerge as a self-sufficient nation?

President Nguyen Van Thieu thinks so. Ellsworth Bunker, former American Ambassador to Saigon, thinks so. And so do prominent Vietnamese businessmen and educators.

There is confidence, but there are pessimists, including a respected three-star general who believes Hanoi is moving faster than Saigon in pushing post-war redevelopment.

"We cannot wait until the guns are silent," Thieu said recently in outlining a seven-year plan for the economic development of South Vietnam. "We must demonstrate that we are able to develop ourselves."

A $16 million hotel in Saigon, managed by the Hilton chain, is on the drawing boards. The announcement came only a few days after Thieu pledged in his May 20 speech to ease foreign investment restrictions and "relax administrative red tape."

"Vietnam has not been destroyed by the war," says a study by the Joint Development Group, made up of prominent South Vietnamese working with the American Development and Resources Corp. whose chief officer is Dr. David E. Lilienthal.

"The depradations of war can be repaired, and substantial progress toward higher standards of living and quality of life can be achieved in a comparatively short time."

Among the major problems which must be overcome are the fact that South Vietnam is now importing $600 to $700 million worth of goods annually while exporting only $30 million worth. Even rice. In 1972, about $78 million worth of rice was imported. The best estimate for 1973 is that $100 million worth will be brought into the country.

The price tag for getting South Vietnam fully on its feet by 1980 is generally placed at $5 billion.

A former cabinet minister put it this way: "First, Vietnam has to work harder—a lot harder than it does now. Second, the Vietnamese must accept a much greater dose of discipline. Third, the administration has to be more honest and more effective. Without these three there will be no tourists, no industry, no development and no prosperity."

According to the best available figures, about half of South Vietnam's 17.5 million population is 18 years of age or younger. An educator said Saigon universities today house 20,000 law students. "Let's face it," he said. "All the males are draft dodgers."

"We are turning out anti-development people," said the man, who once was administrator at the University of Hue. "They don't contribute anything to the economy at all. They don't produce. They consume and they reproduce. They're immature."

Outgoing Ambassador Bunker told the American magazine U.S. News and World Report that South Vietnam had the potential to become one of the richest nations in Southeast Asia. The 79-year-old diplomat said the boom could come in less than 10 years.

The pessimistic general says he is certain "the North Vietnamese are far ahead of us on planning the future." Otherwise, he said, "They would not be sitting down with the Americans—even before we are—to discuss the development of their country."

"I know that President Thieu went to the United States to get money for development," the general went on. "I know the Americans tried to pin him down on specifics, to offer him anything as long as he came up with a plan. The Americans used the argument that 'the North Vietnamese are specific; why not you?'"

The most immediate problem in attracting business and tourism to South Vietnam is to clean up Saigon, whose population has tripled to about 3 million since the early 1950s.

"Right now we're ashamed of Saigon," a businessman said.

"I'm a Vietnamese," he said. "I walk through Chinatown (the Cholon district) and I never see a Chinese beggar. I go back to the Vietnamese section—hands out. Why?

"The Chinese can do it in Cholon—you don't have to go to Singapore to see it. I went to Singapore in 1971 and tried to get a shoeshine. The people said, 'We don't have that trade here—degrading.' I shined my own shoes. It's the pride of the people."

The businessman said recent visitors from Singapore to an economic conference here said the Lee Kuan Yew government invested $300 million over a six-year-period and were able to provide only 25,000 jobs. "We can do much better because we have the agricultural resources that Singapore does not," he said.

South Vietnam's natural resources include more than 1,685 miles of sea coast, along with a network of rivers and canals across the country. The fishing industry is all but untapped.

Despite the massive bombing during the last seven years of war, the country has an estimated 12 million hectares of forest land. Independent, secret seismic studies show that a vast undersea oilfield possibly exists in the South China Sea off the coastline.

South Vietnam now receives about $700 million in foreign economic aid yearly—$600 million from the United States. The country's gross national product is about $2.2 billion, about the size of Singapore's and Malaysia's. Thieu declared in announcing his seven-year plan that the GNP must increase by about nine per cent annually if it is to succeed.

The reopening of bars and night clubs (closed during the 1972 spring offensive) is producing increased tax revenue although high prices in the clubs has caused the initial exuberance for dancing to wear off. Several clubs even have closed for lack of business.

At the time bars were put out of business last May, there were 5,718 registered hostesses although probably three times as many girls actually were working. The figure now is about 2,000.

Probably the majority of girls who worked the sleazy bars of Saigon at the height of the war had Vietnamese husbands who either abandoned them or lost contact because of the fortunes of war.

"I haven't seen my husband in five years," said Mai Thi Thiem, a hostess at the Paradise Bar on Hai Ba Trung street in downtown Saigon. "We just lost contact. But now one of his buddies came around to my family house and said Hoa is returning soon. So I'll go back to our home in Kien Hoa and wait for him. He'll be happy to see that our two sons are well and going to school."

Not all feel the same way.

"I forgot my family eight years ago when I came to Saigon," said Truong Thi Hien.

"I don't want to go back to the dirty country in Tay Ninh. I can last a few more years. I'm putting my money in gold and jewels. There are many more sophisticated Vietnamese men than there used to be. I'll find one of them or an American or other foreigner who wants a good wife. I can handle myself. I'll be a good wife when the right man and I get together."

"We should start a new attitude," says the ex-cabinet official "A new approach, a new era in Vietnam. I have great hope. I feel that in every country in the Orient there are potential Lee Kuan Yews—social minded leaders—people who can reform. They don't have to be imported."

Sensible living saves on energy

By GAIL NEVINS

STROUDSBURG — If you enjoy flashing along the highway is a large powerful car, rushing home to gather dinner supplies from that frost-free refrigerator and hustling them into a self-cleaning oven, then you could probably be classified as an energy freak. Otherwise known as the average American.

According to the public-service organization of Washington, D.C. women called Concern, Inc., that self-cleaning oven is a "large consumer of energy" adding materially to the cost of running a stove. And the frost-free refrigerator "requires 50 per cent more energy to operate than a standard model."

The car is a subject unto itself. If your current Detroit model weighs 5,000 pounds, it consumes more than twice as much gasoline as a small car weighing 2,000 pounds.

Any driver also known that speeding costs money. A car going 75 to 80 miles an hour consumes "almost twice as much fuel per mile" as the same car driven 50 miles an hour.

Even cutting your speed from 60 to 50 miles an hour, says William E. Simon, chairman of the U.S. Government's Oil Policy Committee, increase mileage from five to 10 per cent.

There are, it seems, any number of ways to cut down a family's consumption of energy on the road and in the home and save money at the same time.

This is some of the information that the non-profit consumer organization has gathered into its latest edition of Eco-Tips, a consumer guide offering the results of extensive research they do on many products and services. The current issue is devoted to energy.

What Concern is trying to communicate is that the mounting world scramble for energy means, among many other things, that some 200 million Americans — six per cent of the earth's population — probably cannot go on consuming one-third of the world's total energy output.

One family's contribution, they claim, is not insignificant. Consider the following:

Electric energy consumed by small appliances — toothbrushes, hedge clippers, shavers — constitutes nearly 10 per cent of all residential demand, which is more than three per cent of total U.S. electric energy demand.

"This three per cent," notes Concern, "becomes significant when compared with the Atomic Energy Commission's use of five per cent, the aluminum industry's use of seven per cent and the steel industry's use of five per cent of our electric output."

Recommendation: "Eliminate use of unnecessary appliances."

Some of their suggestions require little more than forethought. Others cost money:

— TV sets with the instant turn-on feature consume electricity 24 hours a day. Tip: Unplug the set when not in use.

— A pilot light consumes at least 10 per cent of the gas used by a stove. Tip: Substitute a switch-operated electric starter for continuous burning of the pilot.

— Demand returnable bottles for drinks. The returnable system, according to a University of Illinois study, "uses approximately 28 per cent of the energy of throwaway bottles and cans.

— Buy paper towels, napkins, tissues and writing paper of recycled paper. Pulp made from recycled waste paper uses 30 to 40 per cent of the energy needed to make pulp from wood.

Teacher's notebook

Reading TV?

By JUDITH GELBER

With all the depressing news about the difficulty in teaching urban ghetto children to read, it is heartening to read of the occasional success story that does not involve huge sums of money and years of preparation.

A middle school in inner-city Philadelphia has achieved outstanding success in its reading program by using videotaped television shows, such as "Kung Fu" and "Sanford and Son" on a closed circuit set in the classroom, along with printed copies of the actual television scripts.

What the children do is watch the show while following the pages of the script. The children choose the shows they want to watch. They also act out the scripts in class, and some children have become enthusiastic enough about the programs to want to write their own scripts.

The essence of the program is having the youngsters read the printed words as they hear them spoken on the screen. The teacher's role is to "reinforce the basic approach (by) passing out the scripts to the students, giving a brief explanation and turning on the set. There are follow-up lessons, derived from the scripts — how the words are used, what they mean, sentence structure, and occasionally, a discussion of the implications of the plot itself."

There are obvious signs of success. A 14-year-old who couldn't read above first-grade level now reads "Kung Fu" scripts. "But the most important thing," his teacher said, "Is that he volunteered to do it. He wanted to read aloud. That's something new here — children who actually want to learn to read."

This boy's success is not isolated. In fact, there has been enough success throughout the program to stimulate 20 more inner-city schools in Philadelphia to try out the program in the next school year. Also, New York City school officials are thinking of using the program, and the Philadelphia archdiosese may use the technique.

The teachers involved in the program are not quite sure why it works so well. But Dr. Marcase, an assistant superintendent of schools and the originator of the program, may have pointed out the reason: "Children who are written off by society as unteachable aren't at all. They will read what they enjoy reading."

In other words, it is more fun to learn to read the story of a television show that appeals to them than it is to learn to read such drivel as, "See Spot run!" And another important factor, I believe, is that their own teacher is doing the teaching, right in the classroom, rather than an anonymous and faraway figure in a television studio.

This program is probably too simple and inexpensive to appeal to some professionals in education who would rather set up costly studies in conjunction with textbook manufacturers who would make scads of money by turning out yet another terribly boring reader. But this success story just shows what imaginative teaching can be like.

The program is being condicted at the Rhodes Middle School in Philadelphia, under the direction of Dr. M. Marcase.

PONYTAIL

"Can you believe that a year ago I thought I couldn't live without that creep!"

Ann Landers

Phone bugs him

Dear Ann Landers: I am an 18-year-old girl who lives at home and commutes to college. My father believes whatever Ann Landers says is LAW.

This morning the phone rang. I was asleep. It kept ringing and ringing. No one answered it until finally I pulled myself out of bed and answered it myself. Then I saw my dad sitting at the table, less than ten feet from the phone, enjoying the newspaper and drinking coffee. I asked, "Don't you believe in answering the phone when it rings?" He replied, "Not since Ann Landers said you don't have to answer the phone if you don't feel like it."

Did you REALLY say that? If so, it is the rudest, most inconsiderate, most anti-social and utterly sick thing I have ever heard of in my life. If you said it, I hope you will retract it in deference to the future sanity of our household. —

Sparks-A-Flying

Dear Sparky: I did say a person need not answer the phone if he doesn't feel like it. But that advice was given in a completely different context. For example, many people complain about being trapped on the phone by long-winded friends and relatives who call at inconvenient times. THAT advice is for THEM. In a household such as yours, however, the person nearest the phone should answer it as a favor to other members of the family.

Dear Ann Landers: Your remark in response to "Just Crushed," that "a gentleman never tells" — made me laugh. How naive can you get?

I've held hands with at least 10,000 men in the past 20 years. You see, I'm a manicurist — and I could write a book about the things I've heard in the barber shops of Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Omaha.

Do you know the favorite topic of most men? WOMEN. Or to be more specific, "women I have known." (And they use the word "known" in the Biblical sense.) Naturally they never talk about their failures — only their conquests. And the dirty dogs name names and places, with no thought of who might be under the towels in the next chair. It could be the lady's husband for all they know.

So please knock off that sweet talk that "a gentleman never tells." They tell plenty.

Miss Clammy Hands Of The Midwest

Dear Miss: I refuse to retract a word of it. Those barbershop blabbermouths can hardly be called gentlemen.

Confidential to A Better Me: How refreshing to get a letter that says, "If people don't like what they are they can stop blaming their parents and go to work on themselves." It's a lot easier to blame inadequacies on others but the real test is what you are going to do about it.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teen-Age Sex — Ten Ways To Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, swped envelope to this newspaper.

Teen Forum

Party pooper

By Jean Adams

BIG PARTY: (Q.) I am invited to this party. A whole bunch of teen-agers are invited. It takes about an hour and a half to get there.

The person who is giving it is a man in his 40s. He used to live in my town. He had a son our age (16) who died of cancer. He wants us all to go up. The party is for us. But my mother won't let me go. She says it's too far!

I want to go because this man is very nice. How can I get my mother to let me go? He is going to have slides, a cookout and telescopes to look at the stars. Do you see anything wrong with this?

Misunderstood In Indiana

(A.) The way you describe it, the party sounds exciting. But parties of this nature do not always end the way they begin.

Your mother, I am sure, is worried about more than the distance. Listen to her, take her advice, and thank her for caring for you.

LETTER: (Q.) I just got a letter from the girl I love saying she doesn't love me. It was quite a shock. I am going into the Navy next week and am afraid I'm going to start drinking hard again.

I had it under control, because I thought there was a good reason to give it up, but this letter tells me I'm wrong. If I should slip back to where I was last summer even the Navy won't want me.

I really thought she loved me. She never gave me any reason to believe otherwise till this letter. Please help me.

17 and Tipsy in Texas

(A.) Give the girl an A for honesty. She did not want you to leave believing something that wasn't true.

Now you can start fresh on all fronts. You will be in a new and challenging environment and you can make new friends.

You will be so busy that you won't have time or need for drinking.

(Jean Adams reads and considers every letter, but she regrets that she cannot answer each letter personally. Mail your question or comments to Jean Adams, care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 2402, Houston, Texas 77001.)

Americans in Cambodia saved army from defeat

By BERT OKULEY

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — "Cricket, this is Nail Two-Zero. I've got an ABF and TIC at Whiskey Tango 17069 and the ground commander at Hotel Two-One is requesting air."

"Nail Two-Zero. This is Cricket. Roger that. We do have TACAIR available. I'll try to get a validation for you. Come up on fox mike secure."

It is the language of the U.S. Air Force. The men who speak it, as well as their Cambodian allies, are agreed that it has saved the Cambodian armed forces from almost certain defeat.

The radio message to "Cricket" comes from the pilot of an OV10 "Bronco" twin-engine armed reconnaissance plane, one of a dozen or more which circle lazily across southern Cambodia daily.

"Cricket" is an orbiting C130 transport plane outfitted with top-secret communications gear for coordinating air strikes with the Khmer National Armed Forces (FANK) and U.S. 7th Air Force headquarters at Nakhon Phanom airbase in northern Thailand. The code name for Nakhon Phanom (NKP to airmen) is "Blue Chip."

Radio frequencies crackle throughout the day with reports of ABFS (attack by fire), TICS, (troops in contact), VRS (visual reconnaissance), TACAIR, (tactical air strikes), RTB (return to base) and the other military lingo common to the only war the United States has left.

Day and night, for nearly four months, American planes have been criss-crossing the skies of Cambodia in a bombing campaign approaching in intensity the peak of U.S. aerial involvement in South Vietnam.

Despite vigorous congressional opposition to the raids, estimated to have cost the U.S. taxpayer nearly $400 million U.S. dollars, the strikes continue.

Unseen B52 Stratoforts striking at night, the swing-wing F111A's each carrying 24 500-pound bombs, A7 Corsairs and F4 Phantoms are averaging more than 200 sorties daily over Cambodia.

A British journalist a few days ago visited the province capital of Takeo, a town 55 miles southwest of Phnom Penh which has been threatened by the Communists for more than two months.

Thinking the reporter was an American, the local commander frankley admitted that Takeo had survived only because of U.S. bombing raids. He delivered an impassioned message of appreciation and concluded with the words, "thank you, America!"

Military sources said later that during the offensive against Takeo, B52 bomber pilots from Guam had been given at least 43 validated targets around the town, located on strategic Highway 2.

The official position in Washington has been than if the American bombing is cut off, Communist forces would quickly take over the tiny republic and once again provide a springboard for a North Vietnamese invasion of South Vietnam.

Despite this, the Senate Appropriation Committee voted unanimously (24-0) in favoring a ban on the bombing of both Cambodia and Laos and supporting amove to deny funds from congress being used to support military operations here.

The congressional furor arose from an April 27 report to Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., chairman of the Subcommittee on U.S. Security Agreements and Committments Abroad, by Investigators James G. Lowenstein and Richard M. Moose. The two probers from March 28 to April 19 visited bases in Thailand, Laos, Saigon, U.S. Pacific Command Headquarters in Honolulu and attempted to obtain information from the U.S. embassy in Phnom Penh on the bombing campaign.

The Moose-Lowenstein report concluded that American planes were flying twice as many strikes over Cambodia as they were prior to the Paris ceasefire agreement. They noted that the stepped-up air action came within two weeks after Cambodian president Marshal Lon Nol announced his troops were unilaterally ending offensive operations.

At the time of the senate study, American air operations were being directed from the white-walled U.S. embassy compound itself. Subsequently, the embassy set up a Direct Air Support Center (DASC) at FANK headquarters.

The Americans also formed a Group Air Operations School (GAOS) to provide crash courses in English for FANK Radio operators and other Cambodian officers closely involved in the air campaign. The Cambodian Air Force consists of about 20 propeller-driven T28 bombers.

Last weekend, because of close radio eavesdropping by western journalists in Phnom Penh, 7th Air Force ordered that most transmissions from pilots to air controllers be made on top-secret UHV (ultra high frequency) bands almost impossible to monitor.

New sophisticated equipment had to be turned over the FANK before the system could be fully operative.

The U.S. Embassy several weeks earlier had summarily ended daily news briefings for reporters because the Cambodian government objected to "briefing facts"—most dealing with defeats of Cambodian units—passed along to newsmen on a "military sources" basis.

The intensity of the air war was brought home to residents of Phnom Penh last month when B52 and F111 raids began shaking the capital nightly. The reverberations from the 500 and 750 pound bombs rumbled across the city, rattling windows and doors.

During the day, American F4 Phantom jets could be seen sweeping across the city to pound communist positions on the east bank of the Mekong less than two miles from the Phnom Penh waterfront.

Thousands gathered along the west bank of the river to watch the fireworks. Soft drink vendors did a brisk trade and an almost carnival atmosphere prevailed.

American pilots, at least on the basis of recent monitored radio traffic, are taking pains to avoid civilian targets although as in any war there have been civilian casualties during the bombing campaign.

No raids are allowed now near pagodas and "undamaged structures" also are off-limits to U.S. air strikes. But, as one military source noted, the Americans can look the other way while a Cambodian T28 hits a previously undamaged target. It then becomes fair game for "real" U.S. air strikes, the source said.

With travel to battlefronts greatly restricted by unsafe roads and virtually no available air transportation, first-hand reports on the effects of the bombing are all but impossible to obtain.

But most if not all of the Mekong river bank pagodas from the South Vietnamese border to Phnom Penh have already been destroyed or damaged after they were used by communist gunners firing on the vital river convoys of fuel and food.

The Communists, if they did not place their big guns actually in the pagodas—looking down directly over the river—sited them alongside. They became inevitable targets.

Official "BDA" (bomb damage assessment) reports are routed for the most part through top-secret frequencies. The U.S. Pacific Command in Honolulu issues daily announcements on the bombing, stating only that raids took place but without pinpointing targets.

Monitored air traffic reports indicate that Cambodian ground commanders often all for air strikes at the slightest enemy provocation. Some units have refused to take the offensive unless air support was guaranteed.

With the advent of the monsoon rainy season, close support strikes for ground units will be limited although the weather will not affect B52 raids or those by radar-guided F111s, each of which cost 15 million U.S. dollars.

The Moose-Lowenstein report said:

"It seems to us to be a fair assumption that the Khmer insurgents will continue to exert military pressure on the Lon Nol government, at least through the remainder of the dry season. It also seems to be a fair assumption that if the Khmer insurgents eventually do agree to a cease-fire they will insist on a role in the government, a cessation of U.S. air operations and either tacit or formal acquiescence to continued North Vietnamese transit of Cambodia in support of their forces in South Vietnam.

"From the point of view of the Khmer insurgents and the North Vietnamese a settlement on these terms would appear to be preferable to an outright takeover of the Cambodian government which might not result in an end to U.S. bombing."

The report concluded that if no political settlement can be brought about "the war will probably continue as long as we are willing to defend from the air a Cambodian army that does not seem to be able to defend itself on the ground."

Stolen auto recovered in N.Y.

BROOKLYN, N.Y. — Stroudsburg police reported a car which was stolen last Saturday in Stroudsburg was recovered early Monday at the Industrial Scrap Co. here.

Police said the car, owned by Anthony Lezzo of Saylorsburg, was stolen at 9:05 p.m. Saturday at the Big N parking lot.

Jack O'Brian's

New York's Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Peter O'Toole's 72-year-old mother was mugged in London... Bigtime boxing name's phones were tapped and the fuzz got lots of bookie-numbers. Also a hint the lad's a silent partner in London & N.Y. gambling casinos... Canada Premier Trudeau's wife Margaret scooted from a London party just at arrival time. Can't stand cigaret smoke; doesn't drink either.

Joan Rivers' TV chatter is naughty but wildly lunatic. She'll be around a long while... Prof. Irwin Corey's been around a showbiz lifetime with the same small joke, and he's finally a small bore... Errol Flynn's daughter Arnella went to London for a modeling career, but the damp climate nosed her out... Wire walkers are better insurance risks than window cleaners.

Obie Bart, who bought the Gay 90s, looked closer at the silver dollars buried in the floor and promptly had replaced them with new ones: the oldies comprised a numismatic fortune...Johnny Mulay, who daylights at the Daily News, moonlights every summer with his swing band at Roseland; goes in June 26. Ever wonder in these dangerous-for-Bdwy.-angels days (takes a year often for a musical to break even) how oldtime shows prospered: John Golden produced "The First Year" for $2,000 (starred Frank Craven) at the tiny Little Theater, ran 725 performances and earned approximately $1,000 a performance — $750,000 profit... "Oklahoma!" pushed a half-million a year profit into the Theater Guild... "Okla!" cost $80,000; "Seesaw," more than a million; "Dude" cost more than a million and ran one night!

Sarah Miles has been preening because a London critic said her voice sounds like Queen Elizabeth's; guess she's never heard Queen Liz...

Mick Jagger's disported a lot more obscenely on stage, but the Rolling Stones' main pebble is boasting he turned down a nude-center fold in Cosmo.

Deah Lennie Bernstein will conduct the Vatican on Pope Paul's 10th anniversary (on his feast day June 23) the Bach Magnificat in the Sala delle Udienze at 5:30 p.m., then Bernstein's own Chichester Psalms sung in Hebrew; also the Harvard Glee Club and the Newark Boys Chorus; then waltzes off to Vienna where his controversial "Mass" gets its first out-of-America performance June 25 — the Yale production; he won't conduct, only attend.

Big Band Loose Ends: Purv Pullen, "Dr. Horation Q. Birdbath" of the old Ben Bernie band later with Spike Jones (when Yonkers' gift to Bdwy. Jack Egan managed same) was in town and filled us in on some of the great old big band virtuosi: Country Washburn of the Ted Weems' Perry Como-era band is a car salesman in Newport Beach, Calif., but doesn't know what happened to Weems' masterful whistler, Elmo Tanner, and hopes whatever that it isn't omnious for that champ pucker-player... Gone to the big booking in the sky are Weemsmen Red Ingle and Marvel (Marilyn later in the movies) Maxwell; Doc's with a toy import and sings the Hialeah Chorus in praise of his Fla. hometown.

Too much TV exposure often is credited with nightclub performers' flops. But Harrah's new Tahoe Hotel opens Sept. 22 with Mike Douglas, the five-a-week star doing two weeks of his syndicated show right on stage. Mike catnips the ladies. Optimistically, while the husbands gamble.

With all the Watergate disaster blamed on borrowed Madison Avenue flannelmouths in the White House, let's note the National Democratic Club in N.Y. now is housed in the Advertising Club on Park Ave. We tell you, they're taking over!

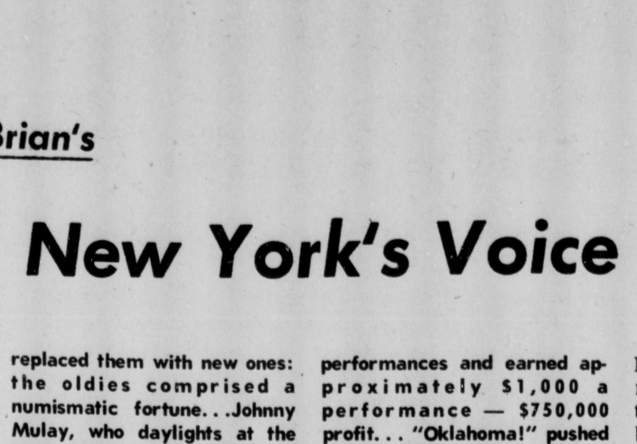

The Sergio Mendez group has a fine new singer named Bonnie Bowden. Sergio always had a keen leer for a sexy lass: Kren Philipp of his Brazil '66 crew now is a zooming H'wood actress (seen in "MASH" and a Paul Newman flick and just boswelled in TV Guide).

Vincent Sardi Jr. who owns Bdwy's. great stage-world restaurant sent out early besuccessful cards to all the planned and rehearsing next-season legit producers and performers... Oregon columnist E.M. Beard (of the Benton County Herald) has an eye-strengthening hobby: counts how many times Rodney Dangerfield straightens his tie on a "Tonight" show: E.M. revealed Rodney recently broke his own record of 20 cravat-straightenings with 34.

Paige Mitchell's "The Covenant" just was sold to Popular Library for $320,000 for paperback rights alone... Victor Borge's future is secure — booked far into 1974: conducts the Cincinnati Symphony May 31 and June 1st, 1974... Madison Ave. is buttering up "Brady Bunch" clown Ann B. Davis: signed on to spread Imperial Margarine for spectacular cash... Eileen Barton, very good cafe and recording singer who quit a bit back has unretired and won raves at the Riverboat, safely sunk beneath the Empire State Building; new tunes, updated material — and the crowds still holler for her "Bake a Cake" hotcake.

Kate Smith's traveling with a bodyguard... American Express signed a multi-million-dollar deal for a five-minute show between halves of every NFL game next season. And the 'tween-halves shows sure need livening... This is the year the Democrats are delighted they lost in '72.

IS YOUR DREAM HOME ONLY A DREAM?

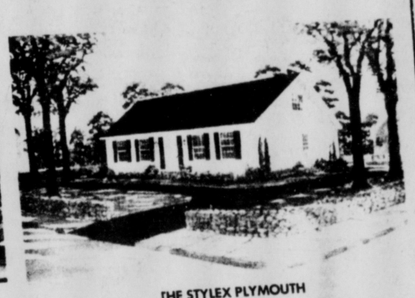

Scenic Construction Corp. can build a Stylex Home, The best of the Factory Manufactured Homes.

THE STYLEX RIVIERA

3 or 4 bedrooms - 1½ baths 24' x 52' approximately 1248 sq. ft. of living space. Modern leisure living is highlighted by the RIVIERA. Low, rambling lines accentuate the tasteful contemporary design of this beautiful ranch home. The crisp modern motif is further intensified by the trim, sleek horizontal sliding windows with insulated glass and just the right touch of decorative vertical aluminum siding . . . a study in contemporary luxury. The masonry items, two car garage and breezeway are optional items. The handsome RIVIERA is also available in 3 or 4 bedrooms.

THE STYLEX PLYMOUTH

2 or 4 bedrooms 24' x 36' — approximately 864 sq. ft. of living space on first floor, 576 sq. ft. available on second floor.

The traditional simplicity of Cape Cod styling lends a practical charm to this smartly designed home. Practical because this beautiful graceful Cape Cod has an expansion attic that can grow with the family . . . quickly and economically expands from 2 to 4 bedrooms. The PLYMOUTH offers luxurious living at a modest price and is a perennial favorite. This fine Cape Cod is one of the best all around values available. It never grows old or out of style . . . always commands respect and pride . . . a truly fine home and investment.
